THE PIERZ CREAMERY

Opening Celebrated Tuesday--Some Excellent Addresses--A Fine Meeting

The celebration at Pierz Tuesday over the opening of a co-operative creamery by the farmers the day before was most successful, there being about 500 people in attendance at the Faust opera house to hear the speeches and join in the festivities.

Rev. J. F. Steigler acted as master of ceremonies and gave a short address of welcome, later giving a quite lengthy talk in German.

The first speaker called on was J. Lindbergh, an inspector of the state dairy and food department. Mr. Lindbergh had been in Pierz last August and at a meeting at that time urged them to organize. He said that the three essentials necessary for the conducting of a successful creamery were co-operation, management and quality of the product. In co-operation the majority rule must be followed, although things decided on might not be just to the liking of the individual. If he is right, he would later have a chance to demonstrate the fact. The failure of a creamery or any other institution was due more to mismanagement than from anything else. The manager and buttermaker, with the secretary and directors should meet together every month so that they would all be conversant with the affairs of the concern, and they would make it known to all those interested in its welfare, which was the proper proceeding as the creamery belonged to them—under this system it would thrive. In speaking of quality he said it was up to the farmer as well as the butter maker. Good butter could not be made unless the farmer brought good cream to make it from. Cream should be brought in often and the farmers should co-operate in bringing in one another's cream.

H. E. White, superintendent of the city schools, was the next speaker on the program and congratulated them on their get-together spirit and he was doubly glad to see Rev. Steigler showing such public spirit by taking interest in such a meeting. He spoke for the most part on the need of agricultural education. There were two ends to attain—to get better returns from the farm, and to raise farming to the same level as in business and the professions. The boys and girls on the farm should be made to feel that there is just as wide a range for the exercise of their wits as there would be in any other line. The work on the farm to the cities is too great, but with the advent of the rural routes, the telephone and the automobile farm conditions would be bettered.

The boy and girl who stays on the farm using his or her brains—as it takes brains to rightly manage a farm—will reap a much better reward than in drifting to the large centers. Mr. White told of the work being done by the agricultural department of our local schools and also of the experiments at the school farm. There were failures, but even failures gave a lesson. Experiment stations were established because the farmer could not afford to experiment. The man on the farm would not mind a great deal of the work on the farm, if he knew just what he was doing for it. He also explained the several laws governing schools which take up the study of agriculture.

Griffith Richards, teacher of agriculture in the High school, spoke on dairy feeds. He said the farmer was getting all the milk from the cow he knew how. The cow was like a machine that turns out a finished product. But it was necessary to put something into the machine to get something out of it. You can't get something for nothing. He spoke of the great value of corn and clover hay as a feed, as well as barley. During his travels about the county he had seen but few silos, and he urged the farmers to take this matter up, as the fodder corn stored therein, makes a most succulent and excellent feed for the dairy cow.

H. L. Bugbee, one of the state institute force, a real farmer who lives at Wrenshall, said that during the summer he personally handled the farm and during the winter months was out organizing farmers' clubs throughout the state, because it meant the furthering of the welfare of people at large as well as the farmer. We talk of conservation of resources, but what have we done for our children? We should strive for conditions so that the boy will be proud that his father was a farmer and glad that he is one himself. We do not accomplish more because we do not get together enough and get acquainted and find out who our neighbor really is. Denmark with its co-operative creameries is a shining example of what can be accomplished. There should be co-operation in egg selling as well as in butter selling. He told of where in one place for every $1000 worth of butter shipped there was $700 worth of eggs shipped. The eggs were sorted as to color and size, and were clean and fresh, and one and a half cents above the market was obtained. He also spoke of the great advantage of having a breeders' association and that the farmers should get together and organize.

Rev. J. F. Steigler gave a fine talk in German, going over practically all that had been said by the previous talkers who spoke in English, and elaborating to some extent on the same. He said that the farmers should patronize their own creamery and support their officers in their work. He said that however wise the farmer might think he was, he could learn much from the men who had been sent out to talk to them. He said that he had advised the farmers to go into the creamery business some years ago, but that they would not listen. Farmers should rotate crops. While on a trip through Europe he told of having seen lands which had been tilled for hundreds of years, producing 30 and 35 bushels of wheat to the acre, due to rotation of crops. The farmer must do his share to get results from the ground. It is a shame for a farmer to say that land is valueless, when he himself has run it down. He said that the soil throughout was well adapted to potato growing and urged them to do more in the tuber line, and spoke of the necessity of getting good seed. Rev. Steigler is an optimist and believes that great advances are to come in agriculture—and especially in the line of dairying.

FT. RIPLEY BOY RECEIVES

Part of Charge in Wrist and Face

Joseph Patnaude of Ft. Ripley had a narrow escape from receiving fatal injuries near his home last Friday morning as a result of the accidental discharge of a 12-gauge shot-gun which he carried. In sliding from a load of hay the shot-gun slipped from his hand and fell to the ground, striking which it was discharged. He received part of the charge in his left wrist and left side of his face but luckily it was only some of the scattering shot that struck him, and on coming to town and having his wound dressed that afternoon he felt considerably better. No serious results are anticipated.

At the conclusion of Rev. Steigler's address, President Theodore Thielien of the Co-operative Creamery, announced that the full cost of the creamery was $3,800, which was much less than a factory of this kind is generally built for. An invitation was extended to visit the creamery and with the band in the lead, the crowd marched to the creamery and gave it an examination, after which the crowd returned to the opera house, where a time was enjoyed in feasting and refreshments.

Faust's eight-piece orchestra rendered several fine selections during the afternoon. This is musical organization that towns several times the size of Pierz, would be proud of.

W. H. LOOMIS PURCHASES

Berg Corner on First Street for This Purpose

Material is at present being hauled for a two story and basement solid brick building which is to be erected this winter on the site of the old J. W. ## N.P. MAY BUILD CUT-OFF

Survey Said to be Made—Little Falls a Division Point

Since last spring the rumor has been persistent among railroad men and will not be downed that a shortening is to be made in the haul over the main line of the Northern Pacific by the construction of a line from this city a little north of west through Todd county and reconnect with the main line at a point near Wadena.

That some change in the main line between Rice and Staples was contemplated by the Northern Pacific has been self-evident since the double tracking of their line between these two points was put off from time to time.

It is said that a survey has been made for the cut-off and that in all likelihood Little Falls will be a division point.
