FRIDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1934

Brother Editor don't forget to meet us at the business session of the Northern Minnesota Editorial association next month. January 16-17, the dates. Program out soon.

Congressman Hammond writes to the Albert Lea Standard that he will not try for the democratic nomination for governor. He is wise in refusing to pull chestnuts out of the fire to save someone else's burnt fingers.

Sulzer lost not in vain. The measures he advocated most strongly have gone through the New York legislature—the Tammanyites voting for them. It remains to be seen what will happen to the graft investigation.

The Carabao club dinner song was a cheap impertinence that should have been cut out long ago. The best way of civilizing the Filipino, or anybody else, is not with the Krag. Privates who would have sung about their immediate superiors as those officers did about theirs would have been court-martialed. The president's disapproval is right.

Prof. Ross of the University of Wisconsin, who has shown in many of his writings that he is fair and broad-minded, departs a long distance from the scientific attitude in his Century article on immigration. The article is one long, unrelieved pessimistic catalogue of incidents gathered to support the extreme anti-immigration policy, and must certainly take the palm for unfairness. No ray of light penetrates the gloom, no recognition, even a grudging one, as to immigrant's part in industry and labor—just a persistent effort to blame for every ill in the land. Against this narrow minded attitude, may be set the conclusion of ex-President Eliot of Harvard, who says, after long years of observation in New England, that immigrants have absorbed and clung to American ideals and risen in civic standards, while native Americans have lowered both ideals and standards.

The first great triumph of the Wilson administration was the passage of the tariff bill; the second is the enactment of the currency law. Many believe the currency law is hardly as advanced in its solution of the financial problem as the tariff measure is in relation to the tariff question, but a great step in advance is conceded. Even were the law full of defects, the principle of government control is recognized, and that is a tremendous gain. Of course, if the financiers should control the government, the principle wouldn't help the people much. The principle conceded, it will be the duty of succeeding congresses to amplify and strengthen it. We regret that the Senate amendments for a limited guarantee of deposits, slight and inconsequential as it was, and a long, long way from the real thing, was struck out by the House conference members. The House has shown itself more narrow than the Senate in this and some other regards. That the principle of deposit guarantee, even in such an emasculated form, would get a hearing in the senate and an amendment be passed, is a remarkable thing, and would have been impossible a few years ago. The new law marks the beginning of a revolution in the control of finances of the country, and is at least an earnest endeavor to carry out the promises of the Baltimore platform. If there is little of the 1896 platform in it, that is doubtless due to changed conditions.

The Backus Hooper, The Banner, Montrose and the Jackson News are three country papers to cease publication for want of patronage and the two Foley papers have consolidated. The publication of a paper today and a few years ago is something quite different.

We don't know where Wheelock's Weekly got the information that P. M. Ringdal was not a candidate for the position now held by Collector E. J. Lynch. The Weekly is much mistaken. However, the matter is not of much importance now.

National Committeeman Lynch is back from Washington, where he probably filed his endorsement of James J. Hill for member of the board to put into effect the new currency law. He could hardly do less. In the words of the classic saying: "Why a friend if not for use?"

The Minneapolis Tribune points out the inconsistency of ladies denouncing the slaughter of birds for their plumage and wearing rare furs at the same time. That is no more inconsistent than to wear diamonds and costly dresses while talking to committees of the legislature about the need of minimum wage legislation.

It is proposed that there be a banquet of democratic "leaders" at St. Paul before spring, and after the more or less eminent gentlemen present have their stomachs filled, they will proceed to select for the democracy of Minnesota a state ticket. There is no particular objection to these gentlemen amusing themselves in this way, but we hope they will not forget that there is a primary law and that the folks at home will have an opportunity to choose a ticket, whether that ticket be the choice of a well fed gathering in St. Paul or not. Because our republican brethren have their troubles, does not mean that the democracy of this state will vote for anything or everybody. The democracy must win, if the victory is worth winning, because it has a better program of constructive and reform legislation and because it presents men whose records and whose personality are evidence that such a program would be carried out if the opportunity came. The democratic masses will want to know these things. They have been fooled long enough. They see no good reason to hurrah for a reactionary or corporation tool, simply because he may call himself a democrat. A man may call himself what he wishes—but what he is, he cannot change. So let the gentlemen in St. Paul propose if they will — the people will disclose.

OUTBURST FROM A WOMAN PAST THIRTY

In the January Woman's Home Companion appears an article entitled "The Girl Who Does Not Marry," in the course of which the author reproduces the following letter from a woman past thirty:

"I am so fond of little children and the desire for motherhood and marriage is so strong in me. It makes me shiver to feel the years going by and hurrying me past all hope of my heart's desire. Life seems sometimes a hateful upside-down thing, the bad women often having the best. When I see the bits of girls about the streets holding their big fat babies I feel as though I could die of envy."

WOULD ADVISE OTHERWISE

Wheelock's Weekly:—Voters should remember that next fall they will be called on to decide whether the state shall adopt the initiative, referendum and the recall, and should get ready for that vote by reading up on the subject. If anybody does not have the time to read up he might vote yes on the proposition, and read up on it afterwards.

The reactionary state representative of a progressive national administration would advise a vote against these excellent measures and read up on them afterwards.

Itasca County Independent:—The matter of a state legislative report bureau for the press of Northern Minnesota should be taken up at the winter meeting of the editorial association at Little Falls. It is a matter which is too important to let drop.
