A prominent doctor said:

"There's more feet ruined during the first sixteen years than in forty years thereafter."

This is probably true. There is no trouble with children's feet when well made shoes are selected. If this neglected foot trouble begins. Very few factories know how to make correct footwear for children. It requires exceptional skill. The shoes we show above—the Selz Waukegan—are considered by experts as being among the most perfect ever produced. They were introduced last fall, after years of experiments by some of the best designers in the country. They are sewed throughout, not nailed. First cost is more, but mighty good shoe insurance for your children.
