

LOCAL MEN HURT ON TRAIN

A. DALRYMPLE AND JOHN BURKEL HURT WHEN FREIGHT CARS UNCOUPLE

A. Dalrymple and John Burkell of this city, conductor and brakeman respectively, on the extra local freight train to Staples, were victims of injuries Wednesday evening when coming into Staples, that will lay them up for a week or ten days.

The accident occurred at about 9 o'clock in the evening, just as the freight was pulling into the freight yards at Staples. The train had stopped for a switch or some other reason and started up again when it uncoupled two cars from the engine. The breaking of the air brake connections caused the entire train of uncoupled cars to set and stop suddenly. Mr. Burkell and Mr. Dalrymple were in the caboose and the sudden stopping of the train threw them from one end of the car to the other.

Mr. Burkell sustained a long cut on the back of the head and Mr. Dalrymple was cut over and under the left eye and he was also cut on the left little finger, the left thumb and the left knee, although not badly. Both men were rendered unconscious for a short time.

An oil lamp in the car was knocked over and this set fire to some papers. Bert Betters, another brakeman who had left the caboose when the train stopped the first time, heard the noise caused by the sudden stopping of the train and returned to the caboose and extinguished the fire with water that was kept in a barrel.

Hammond today by mail from Joseph Sheik of Pierz, who asks to have it analyzed to learn whether the bright yellow particles in the sand on his place are real gold, or only mica or some other form of "fools' gold." The sand is fine and has many glittering particles in it, and Mr. Sheik says there is an immense quantity of the sand. C. M. Andrist, private secretary of the governor, arranged with Dean W. R. Appleby of the University of Minnesota school of mines to have the sample tested.

WAGON SMASHED IN RUNAWAY

A team of horses belonging to Chas. Knutson of Little Elk and driven by Ansgar Hedren, were frightened by some object Wednesday morning, while standing in the alley near the Sylvester & Nichols candy factory. They dashed through the alley and turned west on First avenue, and turning into the alley between First and Kinder streets northeast. As they swung around the corner the wagon struck the corner of the residence occupied by John Lindsey and tore off a large portion of the corner. The wagon was broken in two pieces and the rear wheels and box were left behind, the horses continuing through the alley to the old Richard building, where they swung to the side and followed along the north side of the building to First street. They attempted to pass through a space about four feet in width between the building and a bill board but the wagon was caught between the two and horses were thrown off their feet, one being thrown several feet. A traveling salesman who was passing on First street narrowly escaped being struck by the horses. The wagon was badly smashed but the horses were not even scratched.

STATE PAYS TUITION

Home Districts Formerly Paid for Non-Residents Taking Industrial Training

Litchfield Review: The late legislature made a number of changes in school laws and one of them relates particularly to the payment of tuition on the part of non-resident pupils who receive industrial training in a central school, such as the Litchfield high school. By industrial work is meant training in agriculture, manual training and domestic science, either singly or in combination.

Heretofore the tuition of such non-resident pupils was charged to the pupil's home district which paid the bill. Now the state pays the tuition. The effect of the change should be to encourage children from the rural districts to take industrial courses. Under the law as it stood before the change, rural school boards were forbidden to request their children to refrain from entering the industrial departments in order that the home district might be saved from the bill of tuition.

Reports as to the abundance of birds awaiting the eye of fall hunters vary greatly. Carlos Avery, game and fish commissioner declares, "Reports are general that young native ducks are plentiful in all parts of the state where ducks are accustomed to nest," but "the wet summer interfered seriously with the hatching and rearing of the young prairie chickens, especially in the Red River valley where the many small coveys indicate many young birds have died. Where the land is more rolling conditions are much better. Quail are abundant but ruffed grouse are reported scarce."
