The barber at Tickville still cuts hair on Saturdays. But before entering upon a job he takes the precaution to place fenders over the customer's ears.

Isaac Hellwanger took in the sights at Tickville one day the fore part of this week. While there he went up into a two-story building and looked out the window at the earth below. He wanted to take a ride on a fire escape, but there are none yet in Tickville.

Yam Sims' has set in to courting a red-headed girl near Tickville. It is believed that he don't care anything about her, and is only going there to make Miss Flutie Belcher think more of him.

Clab Hancock, who is a constant reader of the Tickville Tidings and who has been married three times, says he enjoys reading the obituaries but always skips all marriage write-ups.

A presidential possibility is a large-minded person entirely surrounded by enthusiastic constituents.

Film Dillard, who sojourns up near the cerulean headwaters of Gander creek, attended church at Dog Hill Sunday, and while here announced that he had just completed the job of oiling up his fine squirrel rifle and would offer it for sale to be used in case of war with Mexico.

Mites are to chickens what debts are to men.

The Excelsior Fiddling band will give one of its notorious musical entertainments at Rye Straw next Tuesday night, and has asked us to make the announcement. Nobody will have to pay to go in at the door, the occasion being free to everyone, but each person attending will be compelled to pay a dime after he gets seated.
