TERSE DIRECTIONS FOR SILO FILLING
Silo filling is a hurry-up job in order to get all the growth possible and to avoid frost. Consequently everything should be made ready for a continuous run when cutting starts.

The cutter should be put in first class shape, special attention being given to the knives and knife heads. An extra set of knives should be on hand. The blower, fan and both knives should run at the rated speed. Poor joints and a leaky blower mean more power and clogging. The cutter bar should be in good condition and the knives and bar properly adjusted to each other. If any extras are likely to be needed for the corn binder they should be on hand.

Corn Should Be Dented
Authorities agree that the neare-ripe corn is, if it contains enough water to make good silage, the sweeter the silage will be and consequently the more palatable; also the greater the amount of digestible nutrient it will contain. Roughly speaking, a majority of the ears should be dented. When large quantities are to be cut it is necessary to begin before the corn is at its best, otherwise the last cut will be too ripe.

Length to Cut
Short-cut silage means greater silo capacity, less air space, and if the corn is a little dry, less likelihood of spoiling. Short cutting, also, means reduced capacity of the machine and more power. If the stalks are coarse and woody the waste is greater in long-cut silage. In fine stalked corn that is very green there is less difference between the long and short cut.

Water, If Corn is Dry
When corn is very dry from being overripe or frozen, it is often necessary to apply water to the silage in order to make it keep. Enough water should be applied to moisten thoroughly the whole mass. There is little danger of applying too much water.

Power Needed
Roughly speaking it takes 1 1/2 to 2 horse power gas for every ton per hour of green corn cut 1/2 inch in length and blown 30 feet high. From this it will be seen that to cut 10 tons per hour 1/2 inch long and blown into a silo 30 feet high will require approximately a 15 or 20 horse power gas engine. If the same amount per hour is cut 1/4 of an inch long it will require considerably more power.—L. B. Bassett, University Farm, St. Paul.

A delegation of 65 drafted men from Crow Wing county will go to the cantonment at Camp Dodge tomorrow morning. They will stop in this city for breakfast.

WINTER WHEAT HINTS FOR FARMERS OF MINNESOTA

Winter-wheat growing in Minnesota is increasing. The crop is not confined to any section of the state. It has succeeded in the northern part of the Red River Valley, and in the north central and the southern parts of the state when the soil has been well chosen and the seed well put in. It will succeed in almost any part of Minnesota, provided conditions are right. The soil must be well drained, but not drouthy; it must have some protection, either from groves or from establishment on a favorable slope, lying preferably toward the north or northeast.

Does Best on Corn Land
Winter wheat succeeds best on corn land. The best crops have been obtained in many localities where the winter wheat has been sown with a one-horse drill about September 1 between the rows of standing corn. In northwestern Minnesota this method is regarded as the best. Winter wheat may also properly follow some early crop such as barley, early oats, or early potatoes. It can follow wheat or late oats, provided they are off the land early enough to permit plowing and sowing in season.

Early Plowing Necessary
Early plowing of stubble land is essential to a good crop. It is important that contact be established as soon as possible between the furrow slice and the soil beneath. To facilitate this, disking the stubble previous to plowing is advisable when time will allow. After plowing, the land should be disked and harrowed sufficiently to firm the soil and to preserve the moisture. Such treatment also helps to kill the weeds and give good growing conditions. During a dry fall rolling or packing the soil with a corrugated roller will help to insure germination and prompt growth. After the rolling the land should again be harrowed to leave it loose and slightly ridged on the surface. In some places winter wheat is sown with a disk drill in standing wheat or oat stubble. The purpose of sowing it in this way is to gain the protection of the stubble for the winter wheat. While the stubble undoubtedly gives some protection this method cannot be generally advised for the reason that wheat sown in this way is likely to be weedy and sometimes germinates poorly. Sowing in the stubble should be resorted to only in extreme cases. It is essential that the soil be in good condition, though it should not be rich enough to cause the winter wheat to lodge. Wheat sown on corn land that has been manured a year or two previously should give no trouble from this cause.

Early Sowing Advisable
Early sowing of winter wheat is advisable if not absolutely necessary in securing a stand. In Minnesota it should be sown between August 20 and September 10. The earlier date is preferable. After proper preparation of the land the grain is best sown with a drill. It should be sown deep enough to insure reaching moisture, an inch and a half or two inches being the usual depth. At least a bushel and a half of seed is required per acre and indications are that a better stand and a greater likelihood of living over winter will be secured if a bushel and three-fourths or two bushels of seed are used. Something would depend on the quality of the seed, the size of the kernels and its purity. One and three-fourths bushels per acre should be regarded as the proper seeding.—Andrew Boss, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN NOTES
Parsnips and salsify may be left in the ground over winter.
Store some cabbage for the poultry this winter. Chickens also like beets and mangels.
Late spading or plowing of the garden is excellent for next year's crop. Cabbage may be wrapped in paper and placed on shelves or hung from the top of a root cellar.
Save all peas and beans that are not used green. They will be of use during the winter.
Store a few bundles of grain to put out during the winter for the birds.
Save all the garden produce this year. You cannot afford to allow any to go to waste. Somebody can use what you can't.
Celery is best blanched by placing clear dry dirt about the plants when they are dry. If the work is done when the soil or plants are wet they are very likely to decay.
Clean up the garden and burn all weeds and trash. You will destroy and make homeless many insects that had figured on eating your next year's crop.
Onions should not be allowed to become wet during harvest. It roughens their skin, making them unsightly. Store on shallow shelves and bins in a dry, well aired room.—LeRoy Cady, associate horticulturist, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR SEED POTATOES NOW
Now is the time to go through your potato field and remove diseased plants. If one has not a seed plot already, and intends to save seed from his field, it is advisable to select a good portion of the field and take particular care to remove wilted plants (those affected with blackleg, gusarium, etc.), as well as dwarfed plants and mixed varieties.
To secure vigorous, healthy potato plants, seed should be obtained from a strain that is uniformly healthy and robust. Clean storage should then be provided. Before planting the seed should be treated with corrosive sublimate, four ounces to 30 gallons of water. Only clean land, land that has had a three-year, or better, a four or five-year rotation, should be planted to potatoes. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture may be advisable, particularly in the northern parts of the state. Seed plots should be established each year, which should receive special care and from which weak or diseased plants should be removed.—G. R. Bisby, Minnesota Experiment Station.
