The Peerless Universal

The Peerless Universal is larger in body, flues and general construction throughout than any other base burner on the market, in corresponding firepot sizes.

The principle of all hard coal base burners is direct radiation of heat and hot air circulation. This is the point upon which depends the heating capacity of any base burner and is the point where the Peerless Universal excels, as it has more direct radiating surface and more hot air circulating capacity than any other base burner on the market in the same firepot sizes.

The illustration shows a front view of the Peerless Universal. Note the full graceful lines, extra width of front and large heating surface.

This year we have an extra selection of base burners and heaters in all sizes and shapes, for every use.

Call and look over our large assortment and see which stove fits your particular case.
