

HOGWALLOW NEWS

Dunk Hotts, Regular Correspondent (George Bingham)

Poke Bazley is now gathering his wild grapes and persimmons. Poke always raises a good crop of these.

Raz Barlow says Germany is learning a lesson he got many years ago; that it is awfully easy to find trouble and hard to find peace once you get the trouble on your hands.

Everybody in Hogwallow is wearing asafocidita in a bag tied around the neck and eating onions and garlic and taking turpentine to keep off the flu.

Miss Flutie Belcher has already had it. Miss Flutie sometimes appears that every man in town is striving not for financial or political prominence, but for only enough money to enable him to buy an acre of land in the country where he can raise chickens and ducks.

Raz Barlow's champion coon dog, it is said, was whipped to a frazzle by a big coon in Gimble's watch at the other night. This report could not be verified, as Raz has not been found.

Sim Flinders says one can never tell how far a man is going by the size and looks of his suit case.

The running back of clocks on October 27 had but little effect in Hogwallow, as "Clock Hocks" watch at the blacksmith shop is the only time piece here that is running.

The Horse Doctor says he is expecting to be called to see Elsie Hellwanger pretty soon. He made a very bad horse trade Saturday while at Tickville.

Tobe Moseley, who has fourteen good dogs, is alarmed at the rapid spread of diseases.
