ORVIETO WINE SUITED HIM Story of the German Bishop Explains the "Est, Est, Est" on the Bottles. There is a story told of a German bishop in the Middle Ages who traveled through Italy, stopping at every inn to which he came in order to sample the wine of the country. Whenever he found an exceptionally good wine he gave his servant a piece of bear's fat from his pocket, and the servant wrote the Latin word "Est" on the door of the inn, meaning "It is good." Finally the bishop came to Orvieto, and was served with a bottle of Orvieto wine. When he had finished it he asked for another; and when he had finished the second he called for a third; and when he had finished the third he took a piece of chalk from his pocket and went in person to the door of the inn and wrote on it the words "Est! Est! Est!" which meant that the wine of Orvieto was three times as good as any other wine that he had ever tasted. And from that day until the day of his death he remained in Orvieto and drank nothing but Orvieto wine; and his tombstone may be seen in Orvieto to this day, stating that he died of too much Orvieto. As for the wine of Orvieto, the bottles in which it is sold always bear the words "Est! Est! Est!" to commemorate the excellent taste of the German bishop.

MRS. BOWSER'S STORY

And Mr. Bowser's Adventure. By M. QUAD. Dinner was ready at the usual hour, but Mr. Bowser had not appeared. Mrs. Bowser waited three minutes, and then began to worry. Why didn't Mr. Bowser come? Had he gone on a fishing excursion and been wrecked, and perhaps been cast on a lone island, miles and miles at sea? He might have gone up in a flying machine and taken a drop. He might have gone out into the country to buy a piece of land to raise grass-hoppers. Half-past six, and no Mr. Bowser! Mrs. Bowser put on her hat and walked up to the car line. She stood on the corner for a quarter of an hour, and no Mr. Bowser. She returned to the house to telephone, but who could she telephone to? Who kept track and trace of Mr. Bowser? The cook came up to console her, and she did it by saying: "Do not worry, Mrs. Bowser. If Mr. Bowser has fallen off the roof of a building and been smashed all to jelly, that's the end of him, and you can't help him any by worrying. He may have climbed a tree and is afraid to come down." Mrs. Bowser was moving toward the telephone, when it began to ring. She answered very quickly. "Is this Mrs. Bowser?" was the inquiry. "Yes—yes!" "Mrs. Samuel J. Bowser?" "Yes." "You live up on Third place, don't you?" "Yes, I do." "Well, don't get nervous when I tell you something. This is the police station, in the Sixth precinct. "Is—is my husband dead?" was asked in a trembling voice. "Oh, no, madam. He is very much alive. Now, I will make you understand how the case is. A boy, who is a young thief, was stealing from a grocer. A detective saw him and arrested him. The boy fought back, and the two had quite a scrimmage in the street. Mr. Bowser was
