

FARM BUREAU NEWS

Minnesota, our sister city on the west, has become nationally famous through its creamery which is receiving over 1,000,000 pounds of butter annually. This vast amount of butter is rather difficult to comprehend unless by way of comparison. Briefly, it is nearly five times as much as the combined output of the three creameries in Little Falls. It is almost equivalent to the combined output of the six largest creameries in Morrison county: Upsala, Swanville, Randall and Plaza.

The statement that the Milaca Creamery has a large territory is easily credited because there is a creamery only 5 miles east receiving 350,000 pounds of fat annually. One on the west only 3 miles distant with 275,000 pounds while 4 miles to the south a third creamery receives 400,000 pounds. The nearest creamery on the north is 24 miles with an annual run of 180,000 pounds.

What is the secret of this great production? Cow? Yes. Many of them. On an average production basis of 160 pounds per cow in the state, however, there would be about 13,850 cows within a radius of 3 miles of this city of Milaca. The 1920 census shows that there are but 15,069 dairy cows and weifers over two years of age in Milaca county. The difference between these two figures, 1219, would represent the cows which keep three other creameries in Princeton and West Branch. Ask these creameries and they will tell you it can't be done.

The secret then must be better production per cow and herby being a tale. Eight years ago the farmers of Milaca had grade and scrub cows. They started to purchase purebred sires and organized bull associations and it has been proven that seven daughters of an association bull gave on an average 1,990 pounds more milk and 35.3 pounds more fat than their dams.

The results were so striking that the U. S. Department of Agriculture featured them in an exhibit at the National Dairy Show. The Cow Testing Association tells the other half of the story. The average Minnesota cow produces annually 4000 pounds of milk containing 160 pounds of butterfat which at a valuation of 36 cents a pound would be worth $57.60. The cost of feed based on cow testing association records for average cows is $38.65 leaving a return over and above cost of feed of $18.95.

Average figures for 8 cow testing associations reported for 1921 to E. A. Hanson, dairy specialist with the agricultural extension division of the University of Minnesota, indicate that each cow produced 6379 pounds milk containing 238 pounds butterfat which at 26 cents per pound was worth $62.88. The average cost of feed was $40.89, leaving a return in excess of feed costs of $45.99 which is more than twice as much as the average cow returns.

The cow testing association work of the United States was featured in another exhibit at the National Dairy Show by a chart showing the production by states and nations. The average production of all cows in the U. S. is 2627 pounds milk while the average production of all cows in 120 cow testing associations is 5077 pounds milk. Netherlands, Switzerland and Denmark all rank above the U. S. in production, the average being 7585, 6950, and 5666 pounds milk respectively. The average milk production of cows in the U. S. is too low. Economy and competition demand improvement.

This is also true of Morrison county and the territory surrounding Little Falls. The only way to approach the production of Milaca is to start as they did with better sires and a cow testing association. Keeping records of his cows is a business principle which cannot be overlooked by the dairyman who is to make a success of his work. Knowledge in power and cow testing furnishes the knowledge which enables the dairyman to cull wisely, feed properly and climb the steps to success. The following table taken from the records of cow testing associations for a period of eleven years, is illuminating.

The telephone keeps the factory in constant touch with the jobbing house, with the homes of its employees and officials, and with distant cities, towns and villages.

Of all modern conveniences for saving time and effort, none perhaps is worth as much for the money spent as is your telephone.
