BEST SOURCES OF FLAMENT CURRENT

Storage Battery in Conjunction With a Rectifier Forms the Ideal Power Supply.

When the filament current of a vacuum tube is adjusted at normal rated value a small change in filament current will cause a large change in the plate current. Suppose a certain tube is used in a regenerative receiver circuit. Not only does a variation in filament current change the plate current and cause a sound in the telephone receivers, but the plate impedance is changed, and the energy fed back to the grid circuit is changed, which causes the variations in plate current to be amplified.

In order, then, to maintain the plate impedance constant and also to reduce tube noises to a minimum, especially if the receiver is used for radiophone reception, the ideal source of filament current should be at a constant potential. A storage battery represents the best source of constant potential for filament current supply. For those who have alternating current available and want the best results, a storage battery in conjunction with a rectifier forms the ideal power supply for the filaments of the tube. This is especially true if amplifiers are used in conjunction with the receiver, for any variations in filament current causing noises in an amplifier set will be amplified by the successive tubes until the original noises become a veritable roar.

If a single tube is used for reception without amplifiers it is possible to use alternating current as source of filament current. There will always be present in the telephone receivers a 60-cycle hum, but by the use of certain circuits and auxiliary apparatus, this 60-cycle hum can be reduced to a minimum.

The use of alternating current as a source of power supply for the filaments of the vacuum tube has its greatest advantages in cheapness, low maintenance, and the small amount of space needed for its apparatus. A small step-down transformer of such ratio as to reduce the house lighting current to six volts, and of sufficient capacity to light the filament of one tube, can be mounted inside a receiving cabinet as an integral part of the set.

The greatest disadvantage of using alternating current on the filament of a vacuum tube is the ever present 60-cycle hum, and since the supply circuit potential is not absolutely constant, the filament current will vary from time to time, making it necessary to frequently adjust the filament rheostat.

The simplest method of using alternating current for filament current supply is to connect the usual "A" battery leads from the receiver to a step-down transformer which will deliver six volts, as shown in Figure R. This connection, however, will cause a very loud hum in the receivers. Even though the incoming signal will be just as loud as though direct current were used on the filament the alternating current hum is so loud that it will drown out the average signal. Standard vacuum tubes require a potential drop across the filament of approximately four and one-half volts.

Progressing from one in which the grid circuit is inductively coupled to the antenna, we have the circuit shown in Figure Q. In this type of circuit arrangement all of the circuits are tuned and the vacuum tube functions simultaneously as detector, amplifier and oscillator.

The antenna oscillator circuit consists of a variable and the tapped primary of a variocoupler. By the use of a variable antenna series con-fore, be very regrettable if, by a misguided public opinion, obstructions were placed in the way of the fullest and freest developments of the amateur radio station. With regard to the possible lightning risk from the grounded antenna, first—the lightning risk in a city is very remote in any case, and second—the grounded antenna rather acts like a lightning rod and exercises a protective action against lightning. Any danger from the radio power received by the amateur station obviously is ridiculous when considering that the energy of a single pound of coal would be more than enough to operate the radio receiving station continuously for over a thousand years. Certainly this is not enough energy to do harm.

RADIO FLASHES

Vaughn MacCaughy, head of Hawaiian public schools, is arranging to install standard receiving sets in all rural schools. Extension courses, especially in agriculture, will be broadcast from the University of Hawaii.

Broadcasting now appears as an aid to stenographic students, a furnishing them with speeches for transcription in practicing to increase their speed. Several business schools are taking up radio receiving for their speed classes.

On the Pacific coast radio is being extensively used to sell Bibles. Lectures about the Bible are broadcast and an automobile rigged up with an antenna tours the section, giving sales talks by a radio loud speaker.

The famous long-distance radio station, Naues, in Germany, is to be altered so as to increase its range and to meet the increasing traffic in the United States and Argentine republic. The plans include the erection of seven new masts, each 689 feet high, and the dismantling of four of the existing masts.

BUCKMAN

Nov. 14—Announcement was made in church of the coming marriage of Peter Ferlenberg and Miss Mary Weiling.

A party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hesch Sunday evening, the occasion being their 20th wedding anniversary. Those who attended were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gottwalt, of Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Ostrom, of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hesch, Mrs. Olive Meador and family, Mrs. and Mrs. Frank Braun, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Hesch, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mueller, Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Mueller and family, Wolfe Meier, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Grundhofer and family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sitzman, Mr. and Mrs. John Mueller and family, Joseph Gall and Hubert Postor. The evening was spent in playing cards and in conversation and at midnight, a delicious luncheon was served, after which all departed for their homes.

An accident that might have proved serious occurred when Peter Mueller and wife and Teddy Karel went to Little Falls Tuesday. They were struck by a car driven by Edna Postor, driving in the same direction and coming too near to P. E. Mueller's car and smashed the front wheel, making it impossible for them to drive any further. They summoned a truck from Berg's garage to pull them to Little Falls and had the car repaired.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Sitzman and family and Edw. Kohler, Nick, Victor and Regina Hurrell and Aloysius Zenger called on Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sitzman Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Shirms motored to Little Falls Friday to transact business.

Math Mueller and Mr. Herlitz were Pierz callers Monday.

Hass Weisbrich and John Schmolke were transacting business in the county seat Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick H. Mueller and son Mark were callers in Little Falls Friday.

Peter H. Mueller and Teddy Karel were business callers in Pierz Monday.

The Telephone Talks.
Monologue in the Northwestern Bell: "I am a telephone. While I am not broke, I am in the hands of a receiver. I have a mouthpiece, but, unlike a woman, I never use it. Follows use me to make dates with girls and girls use me to break said dates. Husbands call up their wives over me and wives call down their husbands. I never get to call anywhere, but sometimes the company comes and takes me out. I am the Bell of the town, and while I do not get jewelry, I often get rings."
