Impulse Dodds Christmas
By F. H. Sweet
Copyright 1922 by F. H. Sweet

"Tommy Dodd, 'Impulse Dodds,' cattleman, was in Chicago, with his big sale over. And even in Chicago, where sight-seeing cattle-men were common, Impulse Dodd was a noticeable figure, with his six feet odd, free money ways, and almost perpetual smile.
He paused in front of a small, narrow store, whose one window was full of toys. Inside, the counter and shelves were packed with the same kind of goods.
"Just Santa," said Impulse, aloud. "Believe I'll go in."
He closed his fingers tightly and pushed open the door with his thumb, stiffly extended.
"Put in his thumb," he grinned, "and does he pull out a plum?"
In the shop were two men, the one in front of the counter loud-voiced and threatening. "Well, this one is finishing, as Impulse entered, 'I'll give you just two more days to meet your bill, till the day after Christmas. If you don't pay me in full then, I will take possession."
As the man stalked out, Impulse raised his right foot and swung it back and forth thoughtfully.
"Can I show you anything, sir?" he asked a moment later, as Impulse turned to the counter with a half-remorseful frown on his face, adding: "It's just as well you didn't do it, sir. He's a very vindictive man."
"That so? Then I sure wish I had. I don't generally hold back on things, but this city's getting me right scared. I've reined up unusual the last three days. Now 'bout the toys. That man's talk is so easy unraveled. I reckon you'll sell cheap?"
"At almost your own price, sir. There is only this one day to sell, and I can't hope to do enough. I've seen failure for a week past, though for a while I did hope to come out in condition to start again. Now what can I show you?"
"Well, not only one solitary thing in particular, I reckon," scanning the shelves judiciously. "They all look right enticing, and what I didn't buy would make me feel sorry to look at. What'll you take for the bunch?"
The storekeeper moved along the counter, trying to arrange his goods more attractively.
"Look around all you want to," he said amiably. "And there is an easy chair back yonder where you can sit and rest, if you like."
Impulse followed him.
"No wonder you can't sell, if you treat all customers like me," he complained. "Now, see here," slapping a big roll of bills on the counter. "How several of the boys littered.

"Raggy Sally," said one of them. "She's Peanut Seller Bud's girl, an' when we boys throw mud she fights like a wildcat."
"And gives all of you a mighty good drubbing, I hope," commented Impulse. "Now, boys, the two who bring Crawford Bobby and Raggy Sally to me get a four-bit piece each, and tell them they'll get another for coming. Now, the lot of you come back, for the show isn't half over."
Ten minutes later, Crawford Bobby and Raggy Sally stood in front of him. Impulse placed a hand upon a shoulder of each.
"These two are going to be little Santas and give you all a right nice present by and by," he called to the rapidly increasing crowd ofurchins. "Mind, you'll owe it in part to them. Now stampe into the streets and alleys of the neighborhood and corral every boy and girl you can find, and bring 'em here. Just an hour from now this store'll commence to give out presents, and you'll all get one. Nobody will be missed. Hit the street now, the whole lot of you except these two."

"Mr. Santa Claus, I Believe Sir," She Began.

In an hour, the door was thrown open and the rush began, with half a thousand whooping youngsters to make the assault. It was short work, the pillaging of the store, and in forty minutes all was over. And then, just as the hilarious present bearers were scattering into every street and alley, an automobile swerved out from the street traffic and stopped at the curb. In it were an old gentleman and a lady and several girls. The gentleman motioned some of the urchins to the side of the car, where they were questioned as to the extraordinary spectacle. Then a few words passed between the occupants of the car, after which one of the girls alighted and came to the store. Crawford Bobby and Raggy Sally were just outside the door, with their arms full.
"You're the little Santas," smiled the young lady, as she took their hands. "And I just know you had a big time." Then she entered the store and went straight to Impulse.
"Mr. Santa Claus, I believe, sir?" she began.
"Why—er—no," stammered Impulse, turning red. "Only—er—just as a sort of advance agent, named Impulse—I mean Tommy Dodd."
The girl broke into a ringing laugh. "Impulse! I like that," she cried. "Now, Impulse Dodd, have you any definite arrangement for the Christmas holidays—any binding engagement, I mean?"
"N-o-o, nothing except to tramp side-walks and say 'Howdy' to every stranger who'll let me."
"Good! Then there's nothing in the way of our invitation. You see, we're having a houseful of company for the holiday week, and papa and mamma suggested that I ask you. Papa owns a ranch out West, and he says he knows how a stranger must feel in a city at Christmas time, and he thinks a man who can do what you've just done will certainly be an acquisition to our party. And I may add we all feel the same way. You'll come? There is room in our machine."
Impulse nodded. He lacked words fitting to the occasion. A week at a house party! Gee! wouldn't that be stuff to tell the boys at the ranch. Start back the day after Christmas? Who? He? No, sires! That would be rank foolishness. Not till the last gun was fired.
So he walked out to the automobile with the girl, with never a thought of the emptied store behind, or of the beaming, misty-eyed man who could now stock up against without the balful skeleton of a creditor to glare at him over the goods. And as Dodd entered the automobile, one of the girls afterwards declared that she heard him murmur, "And pulled out a plum," though she could not understand why. It was just one of his funny ways.

THE CHRISTMAS PICNIC
By Mary Graham Bonner
(©, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE young people were going to give a Christmas picnic on the day after Christmas. They had all decided that it would be no end of fun to take their skates and have a long day of skating, and to have their dinner out of doors.
They felt it would be particularly good for them, too, to get away from the sweets and holiday food they would constantly be nibbling at if they were home.
So on the day after Christmas they went on the Christmas picnic and skating party.
They all had so much enthusiasm. Everyone was going to take part. Everyone was going to help and assist and work.
But when it came time for dinner everyone seemed hungry but helpless, and somehow the cold seemed to have gloomed in their cheeks and hearts as they skated, but to have numbed them as the work of the picnic loomed in view.
The gay and debonair young man who called himself the life of the party and who had come garbed in knickerbockers and sport sweater was suddenly quiet. He said he was not much good at making a fire. Instead, he seemed to admire himself and his handsome legs and to ignore the opening of the baskets. To be sure, he looked well and his attitude said quite plainly:

The man who invented knickerbockers, without a doubt had good looking legs himself, and perhaps an enemy with particularly ugly ones, but he certainly didn't get the better of me."

But Jerry, who was always a good fire builder and upon whom the work always rested, despite previous protests that it would not this time, was the one now who built the fire.
And the rest of the typical picnic people did the usual things. There was the man who talked about building the fire so as to keep the smoke from blowing in the faces of everyone present.
There was the girl who spoke from time to time in alarmed, sudden sentences, wondering in turn if the salt, pepper, bacon, sugar, milk or coffee pot had been forgotten.
There was the girl who was obviously helpless.
There was the girl who kept asking what she could do to help, who would have received any suggestions with a very bad grace.
And there was Milly, who really undid the packages and cooked the bacon and saw that everyone had enough to eat.
The man who said most about not being hungry inquired with more than an academic interest as to what the filling of the sandwiches might be.
And there was the man present who spoke from time to time of the good things that could have been brought if only he had thought of them sooner.
But Jerry and Milly saw that the picnic was a real picnic, while the others gave their eating services.
And after the picnic was over and Jerry was helping Milly as she washed off the dishes in the boiling water Jerry had saved in the old big kettle, he said:
"Milly, you're the most unselfish girl I've ever known. Different from everyone. I've always thought so. And don't you think we'd make a good team—not only on a picnic but through life?"
And Milly answered:
"That's very much the way I've thought about you, Jerry."
So that you see, Milly and Jerry weren't so much cheated at that picnic as you might have thought. In fact, they had a very merry Christmas picnic!

Christmas Morning
A Ford Sedan
The sound of an automobile horn in front of your home Christmas morning.
The whole family rushes to the window!
There stands a shining, new Ford Sedan with all the beauty of an electric and all the power, dependability and economy of a wonderful Ford motor and chassis.
No other gifts in any quantity can bring such happiness to the whole family on Christmas Day and every day through the coming years as this one gift for all and for yourself—a Ford Sedan.
You will drive it all winter everywhere. It broadens your horizon, eliminates distance between friends, brings the glow of health to pale cheeks and of happiness and relaxation to tired eyes.
You can afford to own a Ford Sedan. The price is fixed by Henry Ford himself—the same everywhere except for freight. And that price is now the lowest ever quoted.
Your usual Christmas gift money may make the first payment. The balance can be paid in monthly installments.
Make it a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year at your house. Arrange to have a Ford Sedan delivered Christmas morning.

HILLMAN
Dec. 19.—Some one borrowed a fat pig of Mr. Erickson and fifteen bushels of oats of Strauch's, one night last week.
Mrs. Swenson met with a serious and painful accident Thursday of last week while on her way home from the store. She slipped on the ice and in falling she threw out her hand, breaking her arm just above the wrist and dislocating the wrist.
Mr. Munt of Richardson visited with Mr. and Mrs. Inselman and family Monday evening.
The basket social at the hall Thursday evening was a very successful and both socially and financially.
The one act play given by the ladies entitled, "The Sewing Society" was excellent. Singing by the ladies, also by a male quartette, was especially good. Mrs. Sieverson, pianist, furnished the music. All spent a very enjoyable evening. May we have many more as pleasant socials during the winter.
Herman Munt was among the business visitors at Hillman Saturday.
Mrs. E. Zell was a Piers' visitor Saturday.
Floyd and Glenn Look and Joe Prestage got their Christmas trees Saturday, also for several of the neighbors.
Peter Braun was a business visitor at Piers Saturday evening.
Mrs. Sell's brother is much improved in health and is pleased to be able to go to school on Friday for a vacation of two weeks. They will have programs in the afternoon recitations and drill by the scholars.

much? Remember there's only one day for selling Santa stuff.
"Do you mean business?" asked the shopkeeper, a sudden hushiness coming into his voice.
"How much?"
"Fifteen hundred, if you mean the cost. But I warn you it's too late to sell much."
"Oh, I'm sure a hustler down home," cheerfully, "and I've a hunch I can move Santa goods tolerable brisk the day before the day. Now let's see, fifteen, with a fair per cent for profit and a little for good will makes it just two thousand. There you are," peeling off another bill $r two, and then replacing the roll in his pocket. "Now, you've got to throw in your services as clerk for the rest of the day."
"But I can't—" began the dazed shopkeeper. But Impulse was at the door.
"Back right soon," he called. "Be getting the goods ready to handle quick."
Outside, Impulse glanced up and down the street. Half a dozen urchins were playing on the sidewalk, two or three were hanging behind a dray, a newsboy was crying his papers. Other youngsters were dimly seen among pedestrians and street vehicles. Impulse put two fingers into his mouth and blew a blast that would cover a mile on the prairie. At the same time the other hand was coming from his pocket with all the coins his fingers could grasp. These were tossed into the air. By the time they had ceased jingling on the sidewalk, fifty more or less grimy little hands were clutching for them.
"Now, you bunch," called Impulse. "Just listen to me for a minute. Who's the most no 'count boy in this neighborhood?"
"Crawfish Bobby," answered a voice promptly. "He never stands treat, an' carries every cent home to his m-a-a-a."
"And the most unpopular girl?"
