

The Goodbye Volunteer HOME COLUMN.

RED WING, FEBRUARY 26, 1862.

PUBLIC LECTURES.

The following named gentlemen will lecture at the times indicated below: W. C. Williston, Tuesday, February 25, 8 o'clock.

LEGAL BLANKS.—We have just printed and have on hand for sale, a large lot of legal blanks, such as Mortgages, Chattel Mortgages, Deeds, and all the instruments usually required by Justices of the Peace.

ADVANCE IN WHEAT.—We are informed that wheat has advanced a little in this market, and is now selling on the streets for 60 cents for No. 1.

PERSONAL.—Last week one of our citizens, A. Thomas, left for Fraziers River. He goes by the way of New York and Panama. We understand that quite a company are talking about going in the spring.

INCIDENT.—While firing a salute on the Anniversary of Washington's birth day, Mr. Charles Littlefield had his face very badly burned by the premature discharge of the cannon. It is feared he will lose the sight of one eye, some of the powder having been driven into it.

CAPT. MATTON'S COMPANY.—A package was received by express to-day from Capt. Matton's Company, containing twelve hundred and eighty dollars, destined for the soldiers' families.—Goodbye Co. Republican 21st n.t.

We are informed by C. G. Reynolds Esq., that he has just received from Capt. Gurnee, money for the following persons: S. P. Chandler, A. Sutter, G. C. McLaughy, M. Molay, Mrs. M. W. Bryant, C. Graham, Mrs. E. A. Reed, J. Britton and $50. for Mrs. George Johnson. We don't know the sums sent to the other persons named, but if they hold any proportion to that sent by George, it is highly commendable to the members of the company.

AN INTOLERABLE NUISANCE.—We mean that pile of wood lying before the Volunteer office door. Whose is it? you ask. Well it belongs to us; but it is no less a nuisance on that account. Nor is it the only nuisance on the street. Main street looks every winter like a great overgrown wood yard. People living on the street and doing business there, must keep fires, and to do so, must burn wood. They must keep their wood somewhere, and if no other place is, nor can be provided, they must keep it in the streets. But a better place can be provided; the back end of the lot is the place to put it, but there is no way to get it there. Then a way must be made; these lots ought not to have been laid out without an alley, but it has been done, and now an alley ought and must be put through. We mention this thing now to call the attention of the city council to it. We hope, for the good and welfare of this city it will be done at the earliest possible moment. It can be done cheaper now, than at a future time.

ALMOST A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—As Mrs. Elder was crossing "Jordan" on her way to church on the 22d inst., she was run over by a team, the horses striking against and knocking her down, but fortunately not stepping on her. Two runners of the boys passed over her body, but singularly enough, she was not hurt; although her bonnet was entirely destroyed, and some other garments soiled. The men on the sled paid no attention to her, even after they had run over her. We hope the parties did not see her, and are not guilty of an intentional outrage of such magnitude.

Some of our citizens highly compliment the chivalry of a small company of Indians who were near by, who manifested the greatest possible indignation at the barbarity of the act, by shouting and shaking their fists at those on the sled, and by such other gesticulations as an excited savage would be likely to make.

THAT ROW, NO ROW.—We were misinformed in regard to the row, at the ball last week. We have, since writing the item that appeared in last week's paper, been informed that the affair was one of the most pleasant of the season. We take great pleasure in making this correction, as it is at all times the farthest from our intention to do or say anything unjustly injurious to any person or persons.

We thought we were justified in saying what we did say, from the fact that we were informed of the facts there stated by persons who pretended to know, and from the further fact that we saw a large pool of blood near the entrance door of the Republican office. The Republican of last week says that it is due to accident or some other cause. Probably. We think we know the key to all this trouble there. If we are not mistaken it is whiskey; but no person who had any thing to do with the party had any thing to do with that. The blood at the Republican office door, we are informed, was occasioned by some one coming down stairs of that building in a disorderly manner.

ANNIVERSARY OF WASHINGTON'S BIRTH DAY.—In obedience to proclamation of the President, and prompted by the patriotic and devoted impulses of their own hearts, the citizens of Red Wing met at two o'clock p. m., of the 22nd inst., at the M. E. Church, to celebrate the birthday of the father of his country with suitable ceremonies.

The booming cannon, in a national salute from the public square, unshrouded in the hour of meeting.

The house was well filled; and as the bell ceased, tolling the venerable Judge Welch arose and announced the object of the meeting, and also read the order of exercises, which were, first, singing that peculiarly American anthem, beginning, "Our country 'tis of thee, sweet land of liberty—of thee we sing," to the tune of "America." The singing was led by a full choir, and participated in by the whole congregation. No extempore prayer by the Rev. Mr. Snow which was listened to by a congregation who seconded it with their silent heart felt petition to the Almighty, for the speedy fulfillment of its request for the quick return of peace and happiness to our now unhappy country; after which the congregation listened with rapt attention to the reading by Mr. Phelps, of Washington's farewell address. And as they listened to that wonderful document, and discovered with what truly prophetic vision the author had looked down through the vista of time to our own times, divining the causes with unerring accuracy that has brought about the scenes now upon us, and warning us with fatherly love to guard against them, they felt that only at remote periods is the world blessed with such a being; and the veneration which his deeds of military glory and patriotic personal sacrifices had already kindled in every bosom was deepened by a more intimate acquaintance with his profound statesmanship.

After reading the address, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," was sung by the whole congregation with a zeal that made the soul stirring doxology doubly inspiring. The whole was closed by a benediction by Rev. Jabez Brooks.

The church was appropriately decorated with evergreens, and American flags, tastefully arranged.

C. P. Ward. It is a pity a public journal occupying a position so exalted as that arrogated to itself by the Goodbye Volunteer, should condescend to prostitute its official columns to the base, mean, groveling, cowardly purpose of manufacturing public sentiment against any private individual.

We are led to make these remarks, much against our own inclinations, by the appearance in that paper, last week, of one of the most unjustifiable and scurrilous attacks upon the character of Mr. O. P. Ward, that we have met with in print in a long time.

We have not a word to say in commendation of Mr. Ward, or any other person here. Let him stand or fall by his own acts. But what we have to say is about the groveling meanness of the proceeding against him. For the benefit of such of our readers as may not have seen the article in the Republican we give a brief statement of the charges made against Mr. Ward. They are as follows, viz: That Mr. Ward lent Robert McCorkle $100, and took a chattel mortgage on a horse worth $100.—that McCorkle lent the State to teach school, making Robert Brown, Esq., his agent to attend to his matters here. That when the note became due Brown asked Ward if he wanted the money, expressing an intention to pay it if he did. That Ward said he did not want it, and would make no trouble about it.—that at that very time he had the horse in his possession, advertised for sale under the mortgage, that next day the horse was sold, Ward bidding him in for $40.—that after paying the debt and cost, there remained in the hands of the Sheriff a sum of money belonging to McCorkle, and Ward told one of McCorkle's creditors where he could get his pay, and received five dollars for giving the information; for doing which, the exceedingly valiant and remarkably honest editor of the Republican terms him a "white livered scoundrel!"

We doubt much if Mr. McCorkle would complain because one of his creditors gets his pay; but it seems the editor of the Republican can't comprehend the honesty of paying a debt, and therefore, the person who assists in getting it is a "white livered scoundrel!"

Now, we ask our readers, what motive had Mr. Meredith in writing that article against Mr. Ward? Perhaps it would trouble you to tell; but we, who have seen the working of just such a "smelling trick" before, can easily divine the object, though we can hardly tell why Mr. Meredith should make himself the tool of any person to effect such an object.

The truth of the case is, there is two sides to this as to every other case. Mr. Ward, the agent of Mr. McCorkle, and Mr. Brown tell widely different stories. If Mr. Brown's story is correct, Mr. Ward acted unjustly. If, on the other hand Mr. Ward's story is true, he was entirely justifiable. Now, there is every prospect that, whichever party is right, a law suit will grow out of the transaction. If such should be the case, the case is one that will be tried by a jury; that jury will be composed, probably of the readers of the Republican; and the sole object of that article was to manufacture, in advance, a sentiment against Mr. Ward—to poison the minds of those persons who may compose the jury, so that, however honest their intentions may be, they cannot take their seats in the jury box with unprejudiced minds. This thing has been done before in this place, against the same individual, with the most telling effect; and in order to make the case a sure thing, Mr. Meredith thinks it necessary to do so again. But one would think that common decency would have suggested to Mr. Meredith the propriety of keeping truth on his side.

We quote from the article a few sentences to show how much regard for the truth has been maintained. "This community possesses an individual incomparably meaner than we, or any one else ever met elsewhere. * * * For the benefit of more distant readers, we explain that reference is made to O. P. Ward, the street broker."—Now we will not say that this is a falsehood, for the interest to lie is an ingredient of that sin, and every person is supposed to look charitably upon his own faults; but we do say it is a mistake. Mr. Meredith, editor of the Goodbye Volunteer, or any other person who would basely, maliciously and falsely slander a private citizen, for the purpose of preventing him from obtaining a fair and impartial trial of his rights in a court of justice, is as far below Mr. Ward in meanness, as Mr. Ward may be below the purest Saint in Paradise: "Every transaction in which he has participated presents some new phase of villainy." This is untrue.—"He was never known to perform any act that would not tarnish the character of an honest man." This is untrue.—"He, (McCorkle) had not the means necessary for removal and presented his difficulty to Ward, who lent him ten dollars, taking a chattel mortgage on a horse worth one hundred dollars." How does Mr. Meredith know the horse was worth $100? We suppose a thing is worth what it will bring in the market. Mr. McCorkle spent nearly a week in town last fall trying to sell the horse for that price but could not get it. "Next day the horse was sold, Ward bidding him off for $40." This is also untrue. Ward paid $48 for the horse, which, if all the previous transactions were fair and honest, is a remarkably good sale for a forced sale. At private sale the horse could not have brought more over seventy-five dollars; and when properly sold at public auction for two-thirds its value, it is well sold.

Johnson's Agricultural Warehouse. EVENS & HAINES' PREMIUM GRAIN DRILL! Improved for 1862. The above drills are all warranted to sow and distribute evenly all kinds of grain, such as WHEAT, RYE, OATS, BARLEY, BUCKWHEAT AND HEMP. These with Grass Seeder attached will sow FLAX, TIMOTHY, CLOVER, MILLET, and HUNGARIAN GRASS SEED. By the use of these Drills large saving of seed is made and a larger yield of grain secured. These Drills can be regulated to deposit the grain at any required depth, and can be changed in a moment to any kind of seed. The seed is better covered, and the soil better prepared than by sowing broadcast. The seed is not so liable to be winter killed, and the frost, which are so disadvantageous to broadcast wheat, have a good influence upon that properly drilled. The growth of drilled wheat is uniform, its ripening is nearly simultaneous, and it is not subject to the ravages of the mildew (yellow weevil) or to damage by rust in the same degree that broadcast wheat is. It ripens uniformly, is not so liable to lodge, and may be gathered with greater security than that sown broadcast. The Drills are arranged so that grass-sowers are attached, that while the grain from one box is being planted in drills, grass seed is sown broadcast from another. These wanting Drills should make application, without delay, to the subscriber. Pamphlets containing a full description of Drill, and numerous certificates, furnished on application. n26v6:ly C. C.
