WILL SINK NO MORE SHIPS

RUSSIA TO DISCONTINUE OUTRAGES, SAYS BALFOUR.

Lord Lansdowne Points Out Inadvisability of Declaring Food Contraband.

London, Aug. 12.—In the house of commons Thursday Premier Balfour speaking on the same lines as Lord Lansdowne in the house of lords, said he was perfectly confident that no neutral ship would again be sunk by the Russians. He fully agreed in the statement that such a sinking was an international outrage and the government had expressed to Russia in the clearest way possible that view with the above result.

Great Britain is distinctly dissatisfied with Russia's attitude in the case of the British steamer Knight Commander, sunk by the Vladivostok squadron, and continues to press the Russian government to make substantial modifications of the list of articles regarded as contraband. Count Benckendorff, the Russian ambassador to Great Britain, called at the foreign office Wednesday, and conferred for an hour with Foreign Secretary Lansdowne, the latter bringing up the question of the changes which should be made in the Russian regulations in order to make them acceptable to the commercial nations, besides pointing out the inadvisability of declaring food, fuel and clothing contraband under all circumstances. Lord Lansdowne dwelt on the sweeping character of Russia's proclamation, some of the provisions of which, after specifying various goods as contraband, closed with the word "etcetera," which, Lord Lansdowne pointed out, can include anything and everything the Russian authorities desire. As this is a serious restriction on neutral shipping, Lord Lansdowne insisted that the regulations should not contain generalities of that kind. In reply Lord Lansdowne was assured that Russia had no desire to unnecessarily hamper neutral shipping, but that she cannot afford to permit Japan to receive supplies which would facilitate her military operations. Russia was prepared to modify her regulations provided Great Britain on her part would accept the regulations and bind herself to observe them in future wars in which she is involved.

END NOT IN SIGHT. Packers Will Not Agree to Another Conference with Strikers—Anxiety in New York.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—There is practically no hope of a settlement of the strike through the intervention of the retail meat dealers. The packers expressed a willingness to confer with a committee of the dealers, but they broadly intimated that under no circumstances would they agree to another conference with the strikers' representatives.

As a matter of fact the packers have agreed that there is no necessity for another conference with the leaders of the strike. They say the strikers violated the first agreement, and that since that violation the packing plants have continued to do business with constantly increasing success.

New York, Aug. 12.—A sympathetic strike of firemen and engineers employed by the big packing houses in the city affected by the strike of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen was scheduled by union leaders to take place Thursday. The strikers claim that the packers will be unable to get a sufficient number of nonunion firemen and engineers to keep the refrigerating plants going, and that, in consequence, the perishable stock will be rendered useless within a short time.
