Death Of E. C. Stringer.

The death of E. C. Stringer, formerly United States district attorney for Minnesota during the last Cleveland administration took place last week at St. Paul.

Mr. Stringer was an able and conscientious attorney, and while in the government service conducted the office of United States attorney fairly and justly all concerned.

He was appointed from Hastings, but after his retirement from the service he located at St. Paul where he resided continuously until his death.

Mr. Stringer has made friends in this vicinity who will regret his early death as he was not an aged man.

Kindly Polygamist.
The sleepy Lithuanian town of Minsk, Russia, has been harboring a man who has married twenty women John Pries' twentieth wife had him arrested the other day for "bigamy," but at the trial it developed that he had committed polygamy. With great confidence the accused called some of his wives to testify in his behalf, and each one of them spoke highly of him in his defense Pries testified: "I know there is some law about a man having only one wife, but, your honor I know there are many more women than men in Minsk and I could not bear to see so many fine women become old maids." The judge dealt mercifully with him, sentencing him to only three months in prison.

HUMOR FROM OVER WATER

Some Samples That Seem to Disprove Englishmen Have No Sense of Wit.

We spoke last Sunday of the Pall Mall Gazette's funny column. Mr. C. E. Jerningham's "Maxims of Marmaduke" gives a more cheerful view of English wit and humor. Here are two or three samples:

"Almost every Englishman imagines he is moral because he objects to immortality—in others."

"He who is drunk in a first-class carriage has had a fit; he who has had a fit in a third-class carriage is drunk!"

"Man—a biped with prejudices—which he calls principles."

Here is a quotation from "Woman as a Work of Art":

"Since her return from the restorers at Homburg Mrs. B.—has, as we expected she would, greatly improved. We are now able to detect the delicate coloring and the elaborate workmanship which were before obscured by unnecessary varnish. In Mrs. B.—the nation has secured an important example of the New York school. She possesses considerable freedom of style, but her middle distance is a trifle pompous."—Boston Herald.

"THAT TURNS AWAY WRATH"

Soft Answer of "Poor Lone Body" Nevertheless Had Something of a Sting to It.

Ellen stopped scrubbing the veranda steps long enough to cast an admiring eye on her employer's garden, says the Youth's Companion. "Sure they are fine posies, ye have, doctor," she said. "I've a neat little house I bought with the money I'd put by, and an elegant garden it had last year, too, but now there's neither stick nor stalk in it."

"What was it, hens or dogs?" asked the doctor, sympathetically, mentioning his own aversions.

"Sure me neighbor—bad luck to her!—had a ditch dug in her land, and the water ran down into me garden, and washed all me seeds away."

"And what did you do about it?"

"What could a poor lone body like me do?"

"Well, didn't you at least say something to the woman, complain or tell her that you wouldn't stand it?"

"Now, doctor, dear, hard words just leads to bad feelings among neighbors, and that ye know as well as I do; and it's not me that would be using them. So I only said to her, I hope I'll live to see the floods flowing over your grave as your ditch waters have flowed over me garden, and I let it go at that."

An Exaggeration.

Lady Algernon Gordon-Lennox, at a dinner in New York, said of the pronunciation of English names:

"They are hard, aren't they?" Main waring is pronounced Mannerling and Beauchamp Beecham. But they're not so hard as I heard an American girl declare they were the other night.

"Oh, those English names of yours!" said she. "To spell a name Cholmondeley and actually pronounce it Marchbanks!"
