

A LETTER FOR WOMEN

From a Woman Whose Serious Illness Was Overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Garnett, Kas.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a complete nervous breakdown following the birth of my oldest child. I got up too soon which caused serious female trouble. I was so weak that I was not able to be on my feet but very little and could not do my house-work at all. I had a bad pain in my left side and it would pain terribly if I stepped off a curb-stone. One day one of your booklets was thrown in the yard and I read every word in it. There were so many who had been helped by your medicine that I wanted to try it and my husband went to town and got me a bottle. It seemed as though I felt relief after the second dose, so I kept on until I had taken five bottles and by that time I was as well as I could wish. About a year later I gave birth to a ten pound boy, and have had two more children since and my health has been fine. If I ever have trouble of any kind I am going to take your medicine for I give it as the praise for my good health. I always recommend your medicine whenever I can."—Mrs. EVA E. SHAY, Garnett, Kansas.

CREDIT AID TO HOLD CROPS URGED BY FARM ORGANIZATION LEADERS

Government Asked to Revive War Finance Corporation and Use Government Grain Corporation Profits—Warehousing and Warehouse Loans to Producers Seen as Permanent Remedy—Steel Trust Refuses to Deflate Its Prices—Armenia Becomes Soviet Republic—Standard Oil Company Buys Big French Paper—Vanderlip Deal May Involve Us with Japan.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Sentiment among the leaders of farm organizations meeting here to consider the low price crisis appears to revolve around the following points:

Farmers should try so far as possible to hold back their produce to prevent further glutting of the market.

To enable them to do this the federal reserve board and the government should do what they can to provide credit.

The demand for a renewal of the war finance corporation in behalf of the farmers is almost universal. This government institution was used during the war to finance manufacturers of war supplies who could not secure adequate financing on proper terms through privately owned banks.

There is also a demand that the profits of the United States Grain corporation, amounting to about 50 million dollars, should be used as a revolving fund for the extension of credit to farmers. A large conference of Washington, Oregon and Idaho farmers, meeting at Spokane in November, declared that the situation was due to a "grain gambler conspiracy," and strongly urged the use of these grain corporation profits.

Federal agents are said to be seeking evidence on which to indict those urging farmers to hold crops, under the anti-trust laws.

PERMANENT REMEDIES.
As for permanent remedies for the present situation, about all that stands out so far is the provision of warehouses under government control to enable the farmers to store their produce and market it over the 12-month period, and the provision of a system of credits which will enable the farmers to obtain funds for current use on these warehouse receipts.

This is the plan which has been advocated by the Nonpartisan league farmers for over five years. And it is interesting to note that the farm organizations which have called themselves conservative are forced to admit the wisdom of the program of this unrespectable organization.

There is a strong demand from all parts of the country that the next congress should do something to put the federal land bank in operation again.

What the conservative leaders of other organizations do not yet see, however, is the obvious fact that they can not get action on these two measures from the politicians in congress. Independent warehousing and warehouse loans to the producer is a revolutionary step, striking at the very basis of market monopoly. Hence, the politicians can not yield, although they may make splendid gestures and fine phrases in behalf of the farmer. Only in a state like North Dakota, where the farmers have secured political power, are effective means for eliminating market evils possible.

STEEL PRICES TO STAY.
Announcement by Judge Elbert Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel corporation, that prices of iron and steel would not be increased in the near future, does not seem to have produced any ripple of excitement in that large section of the press which boasts particularly of its 100-per-cent Americanism.

When the prices of unmonopolized products were tumbling in riotous fashion they saw no humor in the promise of the trust not to increase prices. Their Americanism was not disturbed in the slightest over the fact that a few men could thus announce what the prices for iron and steel would be in the coming months.

The papers which were so disturbed lest the farmers should unpatriotically conspire to set a price on their own products, have no word of censure for the steel trust. If they know of any reason why the steel trust should not be deflated as well as the raisers of livestock, wheat and corn, they have failed to mention it. But they evidently assume that deflation of the steel trust would be harmful for the country.

Iron and steel prices were the first to feel the effect of the war. But evidently they can not feel the effects of peace. OVERTURN IN ARMENIA.
News reports to the effect that the Armenian government, which has been in existence since the close of the world war, has turned over the power to its working class, is a significant event in the Near East.

It really has a world significance because it indicates that the movement against the English and French seizures of territory of the former Turkish empire is gathering strength. Armenia, instead of being a dependent state of the English empire, is now an active part of the Russian-Turkish alliance.

Over a year ago there were reports that the so-called Bolshevik element was strong in the chief cities of Armenia, developed probably by the necessarily bad conditions of the country as a result of the war. Then the flame of Armenian nationalism flared up for a while, probably stimulated by Anglo-French agents. Now it has evidently died out under the threat of Turkish possession. And Armenia secures protection against direct Turkish rule through an understanding with Russia, made possible by the change in government.

Some people living at a comfortable distance from Armenia will be able to demonstrate what a great mistake she has made. But, as a matter of fact, there are many things in life more important even to nobility and large employers than their special property rights. Life itself, and protection to the women and children, are certainly more important.

The stories of the fearful conditions of the refugees from Wrangel's mad attempt in southern Russia indicates what is likely to happen to a class or group which hangs on too long and fights too bitterly for something which is not of supreme importance.

NEW STANDARD OIL MOVES.
The latest event in the world struggle for oil between the Standard Oil company and the Royal Dutch Shell concern, owned chiefly by English capital, is the purchase of oil fields in Sicily by our Standard Oil company.

In consideration for turning over the Sicilian oil-bearing lands to the Standard Oil company the Italian government is said to have asked and received a large loan.

Scarcely less spectacular is the announcement, coming at the same time, that our Standard Oil company has purchased the leading conservative paper in Paris, Le Matin. One can not appreciate how this fits into the oil struggle unless he remembers that during the war the French government attempted to shake itself loose from the grip of the Standard Oil company and to find unmonopolized sources of oil. By means of publicity, spying, bribery and other "business" methods, the Standard Oil succeeded in defeating this attempt temporarily, and the purchase of the leading Paris newspaper is undoubtedly designed to make the Standard's success permanent.

Le Matin will undoubtedly be a most patriotic French paper and will have the charge of "bolshivism" on any one who raises his voice against Standard's monopoly in furnishing the French nation with oils.

THE VANDERLIP DEAL.
While some of the Washington correspondents of the big dailies are sending out stories to the effect that the Vanderlip deal for a concession in northeastern Siberia is a defeat for the Soviet theory, their statements are determined more by what they believe their papers want than by the circumstances of the case.

The concessions made to a group of Los Angeles capitalists, headed by Washington D. Vanderlip, involves one of the most sparsely settled districts of the world, the territory of Siberia west of the 168th meridian. It is a matter of fisheries, furs, oil wells, minerals and forests, rather than of people.

Russia can not defend these undeveloped natural resources from the Japanese, who claim a sphere of influence over the whole of eastern Siberia. Hence, in granting something which she really does not have to a group of American capitalists she may well be cleverly setting two of her enemies, Japan and America, at each other's throats.

We, of course, will defend the rights of our capitalists in Kamchatka on the title bestowed by the Soviet government. The fact that the men behind the scheme are Californians, with strong anti-Japanese feelings, adds to the international dynamite at present in the situation.

Washington D. Vanderlip should not be confused with Frank Vanderlip, the New York banker, who has been in the public eye for a long time.

PLOT AGAINST PRIMARY LAWS.
The Republican landslide is being interpreted by politicians as a sweeping victory for reaction. Following the landslide Republican papers and politicians of Minnesota, Washington and other states advocated abolition of the direct primary laws of these states and substitution of the old convention system.

But as more news comes in from the election it is becoming apparent that wherever the people had a direct issue presented to them they voted against any reversion to old-line politics. In spite of the opposition of Wall street interests soldiers' bonus laws were approved by the people by overwhelming vote in New York, New Jersey, South Dakota and Washington. Bills proposing to change the direct primary laws were defeated in Nebraska by a three-to-one vote and in Montana by a vote of nearly two to one. Attempts to wipe out the presidential primary were also defeated in Montana. In the face of this direct evidence of how the voters stand, the politicians may be forced to revise their idea that Harding's sweeping victory in a mandate to do as they please with what the people have won in long years of struggle.

SELECTING BEST BEEF CALF

Animal Must Have Proper Conformation, Breed Type and Good General Appearance.

If the beef calf selected for raising is to develop into a useful, profitable individual for breeding purposes, it must be a good calf as well as the descendant of good ancestors. Keep in mind that you are either selecting a calf for a herd bull or for a foundation breeding cow. To be classed as a good calf it must have the proper form, which is sometimes spoken of as "type" or "conformation." If you expect to select a calf with these necessary requirements, you should become familiar with them. Study pictures of famous animals; note their form. A score card of the breed you are most interested in would be useful. Learn the different parts of a beef animal and the method of examination in judging them.

In selecting the calf, first get an idea of its general appearance. This you may do by looking at it from a distance of from 10 to 15 feet, observing its weight or growth according to age, conformation, quality, condition, body, breed type, and general disposition. Observe it closely, beginning at the head and neck, then forequarters, body, and hindquarters, in order named. If a bull is selected, it should not have the appearance of a heifer or a steer, but the strong, vigorous, masculine appearance of a bull in every detail. If a heifer is selected, she should have the feminine appearance of a good breeding cow rather than the possible coarseness or roughness of a steer.

Thus observing the calf without putting your hands on it, select one that is stylish and active. When viewed from the front it should have a short face, large muzzle, wide forehead, short neck, and a wide, deep chest, indicating a strong, vigorous constitution. When looked at from the side its back should be straight and level from top of shoulders to the tail. It should have a deep body and smooth, long hindquarters. When viewed from the rear it should present a wide, deep appearance. While as much width as possible is desired, it should not be accompanied with roughness about the shoulders and the hips or hocks. The legs should be rather short, stout, and set wide apart. A calf that stands high from the ground, cut up in the flank, and shallow in the heart girth, has little chance of developing into a useful or profitable breeding animal.

After you have found a calf with good general appearance, have someone hold it so that you can put your hands on it. This is the best way to determine what are called "condition" and "quality." Condition means the amount of flesh and fat the calf has. Select a calf in good growing condition, but not excessively fat. The beef calf for breeding purposes should have great depth of natural flesh and be free from roughness or coarseness in any way. By running the open hand along the back and sides with a slight pressure of the finger tips the amount and quality of condition may be determined. A calf in proper growing condition, while not possessing the depth of flesh of a mature animal, should have a smooth, even covering of firm though not hard flesh along its back and sides and over the shoulders.

Quality may be determined by the eye of the experienced judge, but the hand may also be used to advantage. All the following indicate quality: A thick coat of hair that feels soft and silky and looks glossy; a loose, pliable skin that does not seem thick, rough, or tightly stretched over the body; and rather short legs that appear to have strong, clean bones without roughness or coarseness.

A calf showing early maturity, as indicated by the tendency to put on an even covering of rather firm flesh, is desirable.

Color is of little importance as long as the calf selected has the approved color of the breed desired. There are, however, popular shades and color markings of the different breeds, which you will learn from further study of the breed selected.

Begin Right Now to Conquer Your Rheumatism
If you are going to again rely upon the liniment bottle to try to rub your Rheumatism away, you will be doomed again to nothing but disappointment. A disease that can cause so much pain and suffering is not on the surface of the skin, and cannot be rubbed away.
Many forms of Rheumatism are caused by a tiny disease germ in the blood, and in such cases the only logical treatment is to search out and remove these germs from the blood.
For this purpose there is no more satisfactory remedy than S.S.S., the fine old blood remedy that has been in use for more than fifty years, and has given such general satisfaction for Rheumatism.
Begin taking S.S.S. today, and you will write a complete history of your case, our medical director will give you expert advice, without charge. Address Chief Medical Director, 160 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

50 Years Ago
A young man who practiced medicine in a rural district became famous and was called in consultation in many towns and cities because of his success in the treatment of disease. This was Dr. Pierce's who afterward moved to Buffalo, N. Y. He made up his mind to place some of his medicines before the public, and he put up what he called his "Favorite Prescription," and placed it with the druggists in every state in the Union. For fifty years Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has sold more largely throughout the United States than any other medicine of like character. It's the testimony of thousands of women that it has benefited or entirely eradicated such distressing ailments as women are prone to. It is now sold by druggists in tablet form as well as liquid.
Waukesha, Wis.—"About eighteen years ago I was ill, doctor's medicine did not seem to give me the relief I thought I should have so I began taking Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it cured me in a short space of time. I have never had any return of my ailment."—Mrs. MINNIE STENSLOFF, 736 Pleasant Street.
