

The following is the platform adopted by the Second District Republican Congressional Convention:

Resolved, By the Republican convention of the Second Congressional district, that the clear duty of the national government is to protect and preserve to all the citizens of whatever race or condition, in all their political rights and privileges guaranteed to them by the federal constitution and its amendments.

To encourage and promote by all proper means, the utmost friendly relations and good feeling between all sections of the country, and all classes from its citizens.

To uphold the national faith and credit, to restore stability to the national finances by an early return to specie payments and the preservation of a uniform standard of measure of values, so that the rights of both labor and capital shall be respected and secured; to observe a wise economy in all matters of expenditure and appropriations of the public moneys, to the end, that the public burdens may be lightened.

To elevate and purify the civil service of the country without interfering with the free and independent exercise of political duties and privileges belonging to every citizen.

Resolved, That we believe in such a judicious system of public improvements and inland navigation as will give employment to the laborer and lessen the cost of the transportation of our agricultural products to the great markets of the world.

Resolved, That we denounce the efforts of the Democratic party to cripple and render inefficient the army and navy of the United States.

Resolved, That we have full confidence in the present national administration, and hereby pledge our hearty support in the maintenance and preservation of Republican principles, and in the maintenance of honest government for the people.

MAJOR STRAIT'S SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE.

Messrs. Craft, Jenison and Whipple were sent out to bring in Major Strait, and when he appeared he was received with loud demonstrations of applause. After he was introduced he spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention: I tender to you and through you to the Republicans of the Second district, my profoundest thanks for the high honor of nominating me for the fifth time as the Republican nominee for congress of this district.

In accepting a nomination so generously tendered, I can but assure you that whatever influence I can command shall be used for the best interests of the people of this district and State.

Sensitive as I am of the responsibility which is inseparable from the high honor, I could almost have wished that the honor had fallen upon some one of the more worthy gentlemen whose names have been mentioned. I assure you, however, that I elected it shall be my earnest endeavor to watch and care for the individual as well as the public interests of the people that I have the honor to represent.

I stand before the district free and untrammelled, to bow to the will of the people, obey their dictates, and accept the kind efforts of all.

For the past five years I have endeavored faithfully to serve you, and have to the best of my ability been watchful of your interests. How well the trusts that have been confided to me have been kept is for the people to say. I can but point to the past as an earnest of what I shall hope to accomplish in the future.

I have labored to secure such legislation as would insure to the West cheap transportation, to be accomplished by the improvement of natural water courses, and I believe that congress should make such liberal appropriations as the magnitude of the work and the necessities of the country demand. Liberal appropriations in this direction would give employment to the unemployed, and materially lessen the cost of transportation of our agricultural and other products to the great markets of the world—and would give to us the manufactured articles of the East at greatly reduced prices. Then to a State like ours—young, vigorous, and teeming with resources, growing in power, with its interests varied and important as they are—constant care and watchfulness will be needed, that they receive proper advancement.

A word in reference to the condition of our army. Having been placed by the speaker of the house on the joint committee for its reorganization, I would say that our army is a skeleton, and barely suffices to garrison our outposts, and cannot give proper protection to our frontier settlements. The repeated attempts upon the part of the Democracy of the present house to reduce and destroy the efficiency of the army, and the hostility they have shown, has been met by the Republicans with a solid front, who have united as one man in saying that our army is now quite too small and should not be reduced below its present strength—in which position I am happy to say that I fully concur. [Applause.] Scattered as our army is over so large an extent of country, with our Mexican and Indian frontier to guard, I think no fair-minded man will say it is wise policy to reduce this force. The vanguard of civilization, the hardy pioneers of our frontier, are now demanding protection from the restless and hostile savages, who are roaming over a portion of our borders. It has been recently demonstrated that our federal troops may be required, not only to protect our frontier, but to prevent mobs and violence, and to preserve peace and order in our more populous interior.

Let me ask what party has saved the nation; restored the country; raised the credit of the government; abolished slavery; passed the homestead act; improved our rivers and harbors; given us a uniform currency; made the greenback worth par in gold, and carried out every pledge made to the people? The answer comes, the Republican party! When we are told that the interests of the Democratic party is ended, we answer, no not until every free man, be he white or black, enjoys the blessings of freedom, the blessings of the elective franchise and the blessings of absolute protection, and all the rights and privileges accorded to every citizen of the republic, South as well as North.

When the Republican party came into power the credit of the government was far from what it now is; then our 6 per cent. gold bonds were at a large discount, and today, notwithstanding we are paying two billion dollars, our 4 per cent. bonds are worth par in gold, and our greenbacks are so nearly equal with coin that no one cares to inquire the difference.

Men of both political parties, who love their country, its honor, and its highest faith, should stand together and defend the money of the constitution and the credit of the government.

I have been a resident of the State for the last twenty-three years, and I think all will agree that I am fit to know something of its wants and necessities, and I can assure you that whatever influence or ability I can command, or that past experience has taught me, shall be exerted for the material as well as the general welfare of my constituents.

I shall not consent that the interests and prosperity of this State be crippled that others may be unjustly fostered.

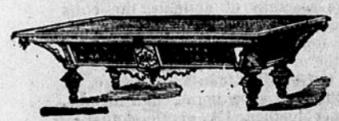

Gentlemen of the convention; allow me to call your attention to the attitude of the Democratic leaders of today, to the cloud of rash war claims, that are now before congress, such as the refunding of the cotton tax; special relief bills; bills for property used or destroyed by the Union forces in the Confederate States during the late unpleasantness; the making of the residue of the war claims upon the public treasury and the destruction of the public credit.

It is for you, gentlemen, and the Republicans not only of this district and State, but of the whole country to answer at the ballot box, in November next as to whether these leaders shall continue to be trusted and be allowed to control the next house of representatives. Let me urge upon you, members of the convention, representing as you do every county in the district, the necessity of a thorough and complete organization. Let this be done and victory at the polls in November next will surely follow.

Again, thanking you for this nomination, I leave it with you and the people of this district to say whether I am worthy of your future confidence.
