

Linden, Nov. 20th. 1878.

Editor Review:

Thinking it may perhaps interest some of your many readers to know how the late political prize fight came out, I will in haste send you a report thereof. A rumor had been in circulation for sometime previous that a political prize fight would be fought at Linden on the 5th inst. in view of which rumor the people commenced to arrive at the designated place at early morn, the ring was soon formed and everything got in readiness. The Hon. Mr. Hermer, of the Norsk American Independent, was chosen as arbitrator, which, in my opinion, was a very fortunate selection and eminently proper, as Mr. Hermer never was known to have political Scrupulousness. Mr. Hermer was invited to make a few remarks, the invitation was accepted, and Mr. Hermer commenced by telling his hearers that it is a very unfortunate time we are living in, that nobody but honest men got office nowadays, that he himself had moved to this State because he had been induced to believe that mean men got office here; "but," says he, "in spite of all my cunning I have been able only to secure a very small office." He recommended strongly the formation of political rings, and wanted all officeholders ringed out, and the like of himself ringed in. He particularly wanted all Post Masters and Land Officers ousted. He was very eloquent in his praise of Donnelly's brass kettles, and lamented equally the present hard times, that manufacturiers were all standing still, that his own plow was lying idle, in fact he said, on the Petroleum V. Nasby style, that Bondholders, Stock-gamblers and Moneyloansers were all getting poor while the farmers were all getting rich. At the conclusion of Mr. Hermer's remarks the other champions were called for. Several combats were fought without particularly interesting the crowd until the name of Helling and Birum were called. The mention of their names made everybody inquisitive. Birum had secured as his second your ex-correspondent Mr. Polecat. Pole was loud in his praise of Birum's fighting quality and was seen to give Birum special instruction in the tricks that are dark and the ways that are crooked. Birum came into the ring with much confidence, while in Helling's face you could see he meant business, and would fight it out on that line if it took all winter. Soon they were paying proper respect to each other. Mr. Pole, with his customary treachery, handed Birum a brick which he hurled against Helling's upper story with such force that it nearly sent him to grass, but quickly regaining his feet he came up smiling and at the 18th round planted a stunner on Birum's smelling apparatus that sent him to grass, and Mr. Pole had the mortification of seeing his champion beaten. Next came Charley Brandt and Peter Bertrand. Anyone seeing these two gents would naturally think that Peter would have only to walk over the field. Peter stepped in to the ring very haughty, looked scornfully down on Charley, and said to him he could swallow him whole. Charley intimated that if he could he would have more brains in his belly than in his head. This seemed to irritate Peter, and he told Charley that if he gave him any more of his sass, he would sit down on him and smother him. Charley replied he'd rather like that kind a smothering. This made matters worse, and Peter hinted that prudence would dictate his (Charley's) withdrawal. The only answer Charley made was to send out a blow, that put one of Peter's peepers in mourning, and it was soon evident that prudence would dictate the early withdrawal of somebody else but Charley, for at the 35th round Peter was knocked off his pegs and it again became the sad duty of Mr. Pole to take care of another of his defeated pets. Next came Albert Blanchard and Capt. George. Albert's manly shape was the admiration of everybody, and to see Albert to advantage he must be seen in the ring. The Capt. came up with hat in hand and smiling, with a "how do you do, Mr. Blanch." "just this way" says Blanch. and let fly a left-hander that sent the Capt. out of the ring kitting. Time was called but the Capt. did not put in an appearance again. Blanch. turned to the crowd and intimated that if anyone wanted to take the Capt. place he would accommodate them, but the crowd had evidently seen enough of Blanch's, boxing quality, and all declined with thanks. In order then to show off his activity he raked down a regular Virginia reel, to the great delight of the little boys, turned a hand-spring and disappeared from the ring. Next on the list came Casper Christensen and Geo. Kuhlman. Casper walked in to the ring with great dignity while in George's pliz you could see "root hog on die." Some very fine sparring was now indulged in, until, to every body surprise, the wet nurse put in an appearance, shouting "die dog or eat a hatchet." She struck right and left, and in order to get rid of that nuisance George turned round and with the sweep of his fist sent the wet nurse over the rope amongst some benches, where she was left standing on her head in a very awkward and unlady-like position. Casper now pressed George with vigor. "Mr. Pole shouted to George to strike him on the head with a double-barrel bowey-knife. While George was getting out that piece of furniture Casper turned round and in ram fashion butted Mr. Pole plumb in the center of his bread basket, doubled him up like a jack-knife and sent him to grass. Terrible was the fall, and it would in all human probability ended Mr. Pole's future usefulness but for the fact that he happened to land in a very nice soft cushion lost there shortly before by a cow. While Casper was in a stooping posture, George improved the opportunity by planting the toe of his boot with such vigor on Casper's unmentionable as to send him over the rope to keep company with the wet nurse; he quickly rose however, brushed the dust, mounted a high rock and regarding the disastrous fall, asked: "How do you do, Judge of Probate." His chances for that position were certainly in a condition to cause anxiety. Next comes Jonas Laudenschlager and Dr. Marcellus, these gents took up their respective positions one on each side of the ring, without showing any dispositions of coming to business. This was, I believe, a clear case of, "one afraid of the other." They would probably still be occupying the same positions but for the jeering from the crowd, so they began to feel of each other carefully. It was however very noticeable that Jonas had the moral support of the crowd. The only Landsman there, was heard to make the following remark: "By tam, if ever the goroner mit to shury bish to sot on mine poty, then py golly I want Jonas. Das ish so sure as never was." This seemed to encourage Jonas somewhat and he commenced to whooper up in good style, and soon he had a clear field: This ended the fight, and your correspondent went to reconnoiter the field. Capt. George seemed to have fared the worst of them all. One of his peepers was closed up and looked bad, muchly. Mr. Pole looked as though this was a weary world indeed; his bowels were considerably demoralized and I understand a mustard plaster had to be applied to the broadest part of his body. Your correspondent then went home meditating on the wickedness of this world. ONE OF THE BOYS.

There was a good deal of trouble in the last congress, to find a Democrat who had sufficient military training to serve as chairman of the military committee of the house. Finally Speaker Randall hit upon Banning, who made a bad enough mess of it. A New Orleans paper suggests a way out of the difficulty in the next house by the appointment of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston. Fancy General Sherman called before the committee to give testimony upon some point connected with military organization or discipline upon the summons of the man who surrendered to him in North Carolina.—Pioneer Press
