DEMOLISHED.

Carl Schurz Handled Without Gloves by Joseph Brucker.

At the meeting at Milwaukee addressed by Carl Schurz an arrangement was made whereby the Committee of fifty German Republicans were to be permitted to ask questions. The howling Democratic mob, however, prevented the arrangement from being carried out. At a subsequent meeting Brucker addressed 3,000 German Republicans. In the course of his speech publicans. In the course of his speech he said:

Since Schurz has left the Republican party he has also left its platform of principles, and as the Democratic party since twenty years ago is ashamed to defend before the American people its history, its public acts, its plans, its purposes, and its policy, it has been compelled in every campaign to use its weapons for an assault upon the character of the Republican Presidential candidate. So against Hayes, against Garfield, and now against Blaine, Mr. Schurz has always combatted the Democratic party so long as he was with the Republicans, on account of its principles, and to-day he says not a word of those principles, but fights a personal battle against Blaine, and attempts to make the country believe that its hoper depends on a defeat of Blaine.

Schurz styles himself an Independent Republican, but in reality appears much otherwise. If Mr. Schurz desires Grover Cleveland to carry into effect the duties imposed upon him by the Civil-service Reform Commission of New York, he must also desire that he be supported therein by a Democratic Congress, not that a Republican shall cross his plans. Nothing is more determined.

Why does Mr. Schurz not now in 1884 draw the same conclusion which has so eloquently expressed in 1870.

In 1880 care the party of the party when he sat in the Chinggo convention of the party, who always wish to lead, but never to follow, who yet insist that the grant and the role of the party, who always wish to lead, but never to follow, who yet insist that the grant party in the the principles of the Republican party; that the principles of the Republican party is that the principles of the Republican party are yet their own.

It was a close observer of Carl Schurry when he sat in the Chicago convention, and saw how de exultantly applicated the reading of the Republican party is that the principles of the Republican party is that the principles of the Republican party is the state of the Republican party is the reading of the Republican party is the reading of the Republican party is the state of the Republican party is the reading of the Republican party is the state of the Republican party is the rea ernment; the eradication of Mormonism; establishment of a fleet; eighthour work; honest payment of the National debt; maintenance of the public credit; a decided foreign policy; and many measures leading toward a weal of the people and the welfare of the country. This was all very agreeable to Mr. Schurz, but now the convention arrived at the nomination of a candidate. Schurz and consorts desired Eddate. Schurz and consorts desired Edmunds, the political machine desired Arthur, and the ardent desire of the people gave rise to the nomination of Blaine. The Independents held it in their power to nominate Arthur, but would his nomination have helped

THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE prevailed and Blaine was nominated, and the Independents did not see fit to submit to the will of the majority; they all not however remain passive. of the pulse of public sentiment as did Mr. Schurz in the Greeley campaign, but on the contrary the more the will-marked outlines of his person came to the recognition of the people, the more was learned of him, the more he became associated with history, the more admirable became his abilities as states-admirable became his abilities as statesman, orator, his patriotic spirit, his grandly developed nature.

Blaine was never a political weathercock, his early developed character and his native political instinct guarded him against such inconsistencies as are native (?) to Mr. Schurz, and unfortunately also to myself.

Because the people knew what Blaine is and always was, therefore it so emphatically demanded his nomination at Chicago. The Independents admit all this. Mr. Schurz does not accuse Blaine of any political misstep. He doesn't dispute the mental superiority of the man, his energy and ability. All that Mr. Schurz has to complain of, and what could really justly be complained of were it true as Mr. Schurz endeavors to picture it, are Mr. Blaine's business transactions. Schurz preplained of were it true as Mr. Schurz endeavors to picture it, are Mr. Blaine's business transactions. Schurz pretends to recognize in Blaine a character tainted by corruption. But what is it that draws Mr. Schurz to this conclusion? The wealth of Blaine and the Mulligan letters? Schurz does not, however, say whether Blaine is a whole or only a part millionaire, He does not know but that he possesses only a quarter of a million, or even less. Enough, he is rich, and, in accordance with his notion, this can not have been accumulated by righteous means. That seems suspicious. How did Blaine become rich? He was in Congress twenty years, and one can not amass riches by the salary of a member of Congress. That Mr. Schurz knows, who, as he states, left every office poorer than he entered it. Blaine's wealth, therefore, savors of corruption, he reasons. Where did he get this money? Question—has Mr. Schurz endeavored to find these fountain heads? Does he know of all the business transactions of Mr. Blaine? I know merchants who became rich over night by fortunate speculations. Blaine many years ago bought land near Pittsburg, in Pennsylvania, which eventually proved very valuable, as it was in the coal district. Mr. Brucker concluded his speech as follows: On the 4th of next November will the principles of the Republican party be again indorsed, and James G. Blaine elected President, for he is chosen to represent the plans, aims, and policy of the Republican party. The sen to represent the plans, aims, and policy of the Republican party. There he lives with his family. There he began his brilliant career, and this verdict of the people has struck his accusers with annihilatory power. The verdict of the people of Maine will swell, avaianche like, until the 4th of November through all the States from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, and on the 5th of November the anthem of the million citizens will come from a full heart, and swell the chorus "The victory is ours," The contest turns, as was seen from the first, upon the votes of New York and New Jersey. There are at least four Southern States in which Mr. Blaine will have a majority of the honest votes. But these votes will never be counted for him if it is possible to defeat him by counting them falsely. In New York and New Jersey the result turns on the opinions of the men who are engaged in manufactures and mining in regard to the tarrimental to the carrying into effect of a measure than when a diversity of interests resists the consummation. It is therefore that we Republicans desire to have elected with Blaine a large number of Congressmen, and it is therefore that the Democrats do not only desire to place Grovar Cleveland in the Presidential chair, but to associate with him a Democratic Congress. mous frauds may yet be devised by a party which selects the contriver of the Morey forgery for its manager.—New York Tribune.
