WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 30, 1887.
Mr. Powell, the democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio, was in Washington last week importuning the administration to come to his relief. Mr. Powell has the blues. His visit was like a wet blanket to the Ohio portion of the democracy who held office here. He says frankly there is no hope in this fall's election unless the administration will do something. Powell's positiveness is worthy of charitable consideration. He says, too, if Ohio goes Republican this year, it will work serious damage to Mr. Cleveland's prospects for next year. This prediction proves Powell's foresight. Powell told the President that the Ohio democracy were very luke-warm, and had little incentive for active participation in this campaign, because several offices were still held by the Republicans, while working democrats stood out in the cold champing their bits and wondering what they were harnessed for. It is understood here that the President promised Powell some relief, but that the collections for the campaign fund were exceedingly small.

Next Friday the President starts on his swing through portions of the West and South. The program is well arranged and quite elaborate, and there is no reason why he should not have a good time, fully enjoy himself, and return a wiser man. Never having traveled much this trip may enlarge his ideas of the magnitude and majesty of the country and give him a more exalted conception of the duties and responsibilities of his high position. If that purpose is accomplished the country can well afford the time and expense of his absence from duty, though the ulterior object be one of the most selfish and partisan. That heart is a cold one that would envy the administration a little dress parade at this time. It needs something, and certainly this is thin enough. True, half the invitations were worked up in Washington, but what matters that? The President has accepted and is going, and there will be the local boom and excitement, the great display, the crowd and rush, and let us hope no great disappointment or feelings of disgust, when the fever is over and second thought has fair play.

The late New York Republican convention does not suit the democrats here. They gather in squads and talk over the situation, but never with feelings of exultation. They expected a split in the Republican party. It did not come. Such a thing don't materialize this year anywhere, and is merely a democratic myth. After November New York will be taken out of the list of doubtful states for '88, as Indiana and Virginia have already been, and Maryland and Georgia just trembling in the balance.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue is going to throw a bomb shell into the beer garden. He says, and doubtless very correctly, that the law is badly violated by way of the most shameful adulterations, and that the ingredients used in the manufacture of beer are very deleterious, and great fraud is perpetrated upon the Government and the people. He is gathering samples from various sections, having them fully analyzed, and proposes to submit to Congress an elaborate report exposing the whole sham, and demanding positive and stringent legislation. He feels confident in making a showing that will startle the country, and force Congress to prompt and decisive action. This expose, too, may prove an important factor in the discussion of the question whether the Internal Revenue shall be removed or not. If adulterations are so flagrant, it would seem almost criminal to remove what restraints we now have.

Treasury officials regard all fear of a financial crisis as settled for the present. The response to the recent offer to buy bonds at a given price, is fully as generous as expected, and the Secretary claims that he can readily check any speculative movement as they may be attempted on the part of heavy bond holders. This of course must be done, otherwise the result would be appalling. There are two months to be bridged over before Congress will meet, and if the Treasury is skillful enough for the emergency, we may escape a great calamity and possibly profit in the future by this narrow deliverance.

Perry Belmont, of New York, is said to be booked for Assistant Secretary of the State to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Gov. Porter. It is also rumored that Oberly, of the Civil Service Commission, will resign and become Secretary of the National Democratic Committee. Oberly is well schooled in that line, and would be in his right element there.

County Commissioners Adjourned Meeting, Sept. 25, 1887.

The board met pursuant to adjournment Monday, Sept. 26, 1887, at 11 o'clock, A. M. Present, E. G. Koch, chairman, Nicholas Gulden, Anton Manderfeld, H. M. Ball and H. Feuerstein.

Summons having been served on the County Commissioners, Auditor and Treasurer to answer in a certain action brought by German Friton as plaintiff, and the County Commissioners, Auditor and Treasurer as defendants, it was on motion agreed to lay the same on the table.

A CARD.

The public is hereby notified that a cigar manufacturer in St. Peter, has unscrupulously, without my consent or sanction, and in an underhanded way taken the brand-name of my celebrated White Rose Cigars. This is a base attempt to undermine my trade on this brand and to build a false reputation for his goods on the widespread reputation my "Original White Rose Cigars" have achieved in a period of four years. As my only recourse is in the justice and love of fair play which ever exists in the public mind, I take this method of notification and leave the rest to your sense of fairness. Respectfully

Factory No. 4.
N. B. When purchasing the "White Rose" please be sure that the brand on top of box reads "L. A. Malmo's Original White Rose" and thus favor me and protect yourselves.

Renews Her Youth.

Mrs. Phoebe Chesley, Peterson, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the resident of the town: "I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness and am able to do all my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain." Try a bottle, only 50c. at C. L. Roos' Drug Store.

London Exchange: "Come doctor," said the hostess, "you are very skillful I will give you the honor of carving."

"With pleasure madame."

And immediately he begins his task. He is very absent minded, and when he has finally made a deep cut in the leg of mutton he stops, takes a roll of linen and some lint out of his pocket and carefully bandages the wound. Then after regarding it critically, he remarks, with professional gravity, while the guests are stupefied with astonishment.

"There, with rest and good care there is nothing to fear."
