WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28, 1887. Cleveland contributes $1000 and Lanont $250 to the campaign fund in New York. With this example at the White House, the department officials feel safe in "doing likewise", and the consequence is that a good round sum goes to that State for partisan purposes. If there are any merits in the Civil Service Law, it will be hard to discover them after a little more strangling.

The President says in his Thanksgiving Proclamation, that "every path of honest toil has led to comfort and contentment", but hundreds of Union soldiers and widows who have been discharged from the Government Printing Office for no reason but to give place to confederates and partisans, discover little beauty in such a heartless sentiment.

The Republican party has always favored a cheap postal system. The Republicans alone we are indebted for the present rates. Representative Cannon, of Illinois, is entitled to more than any other man, for this great blessing. He now proposes to reduce letter postage to one cent, and will press this winter his measure with the hope of success. If Congress had more such practical men, there would be far less ground for

I had a talk yesterday with Senator Cullom, of Illinois, who is really the father of the Inter-State Commerce Bill. He says the Commission is giving a rather rigid construction to the law, but on the whole he believes it is working well, and with some modifications which he will propose in the early part of the session, with confident expectation of approval, he thinks the law will become popular and will be thoroughly endorsed by the people. By the way, some of the Senator's friends say there is a Presidential bee buzzing around his ear. The Republican party is blessed with an abundance of good Presidential material, and Gov. Cullom is among the number, who sit in the

There will be a complete re-organization of Senate Committees this winter, and possibly a change in the subordinate official list. Secretary McCook does not give the best satisfaction, and Sergeant at Arms Kennedy has an admirable faculty of alienating friends. There will be some loud talk about these two gentlemen at the first caucus meeting of the Republican Senators.

From the mass of information that I have gathered from the records in the Bureau of Statistics, I summarize for this letter the following interesting cialty. As we have lately enlarged the schooners of the schoolers of the s excellent facilities for supplying upon are questions of great public dis- Flizabeth City, N. The United States has 101,684 men, and 6,606 vessels engaged in the fishing industry. The annual fish catch of the world, so far as calculated by civilized governments, amounts to 1,500,000 tons. This by careful calculation, I compute to be equal to 150,000 car loads, which would make a train 910 miles long.

The annual consumption of beer in this country amounts to 609,765,347 gallons, at a cost to the consumer of $304,-852,438. That of distilled spirits to 74,-673,429 gallons, at a cost of $337,500,-000. The use of distilled spirits is gradually decreasing while that of beer is Nearly all the sugar produced in the United States is made in Louisiana, and amounts this year to 145,000 hogheads, or about one twelfth of what we consume. Seven other States produce sugar, but in small quantities, and chiefly for local consumption. We are the largest consumers of sugar per capita in the world, and it takes 1,389,125 ton this year to supply us.

The total number of sheep in the United States was, in 1886, 48,322,331, and in 1887, 44,758,314, being a decrease of 3,563,017, in one year, but taking the past twelve years together there is an increase of 10,975,914. California, Ohio and Texas rank the highest, having recent demonstration to Jeff Davis at nearly 5,000,000 each. Kansas and Colorado are increasing more rapidly than any other States in this industry. For the year ending June 30, we imported 107,000,000, pounds of wool, at a cost of $16,000,000.

An Indian Newspaper. Something of the One Issued at the Carlisle School. "Eadle Keatah Tah" is the name of a paper published at the school for Indian children at Carlisle, especially to the interests of the school and the education of the Indian. It is always full of interesting gossip about the school and the Indian problem. The latest issue of the paper gives some especially interesting facts about this school and its work during the past year. It shows that there are in the school representatives of forty different tribes, numbering over 500. The work which these 500 young Indians are accomplishing is a very interesting and probably valuable one. Carpentering, wagon making, harness making, tailoring, shoemaking, turning, painting, printing, baking and farming are taught the beys. The girls are taught sewing, laundry work and housekeeping. The school, however, does not give its entire attention to this manual training. By no means. It judiciously divides the time of the pupil between learning to read and write and figure and learning some useful trade or occupation. Part of the time of each day or week is given to the physical training and part to the mental training. Of course this is slow business, and the superintendent, in his last report, says that it takes eight years to teach the young Indians a trade and graduate them in a grammar school. At the school twenty boys are learning carpentering, thirteen wagon making, thirty harness making, twenty-seven tailoring, thirtynine shoemaking, fourteen tinning, fifteen printing and 202 farming. The girls learn laundry work, sewing and housework. One very important feature of the system practiced at this school is the plan of putting the young Indians out in farmers' families to assist in work. By this they get practical lessons in farming and in all the methods of civilized life, the details of a farm both indoors and out. The students at the school seem to thoroughly appreciate the value of these "outings" and the farmers are anxious to get them at $10 a month and board.

The Old Remedy the Best.

storm Monday night, and all on board Smithsonian Institute Experiments with Snake Poison.

The Smithsonian Institution does a great deal of good, first and last; but it has just undertaken an investigation he would not give them up. 'The dis- reptile division of the institution has begun a series of experiments with snake poison, with a view to discover some antidote for rattlesnake bites. A number of large rattlesnakes from the Virginia mountains have been secured for the purpose. Now it is well known. in the Southern States especially, that whisky is the only sovereign remedy for rattlesnake bites. It is not only remedy but a preventive. So strong is the faith in its valueable properties that men have been known to drink whisky in the snake country so as to be prepared for any emergency. No intelligent rattlesnake-would knowingly bite a man saturated with whisky, for such a course would be suicidal. Perhaps the division of the Smithsonian Institution may discover a new antidote for the rattlesnake's bite, but it cannot hope to compete successfully with the old reliable remedy now in use.-Norwhich Bulletin.
