

The Weekly Graphic.

Dr. J. M. SWETNAM, Pub. & Prop. KIRKSVILLE, MISSOURI. W. M. GILL, Editor. FRIDAY, AUGUST 19, 1881.

THIS ISSUE.

This issue of the GRAPHIC, although only an average one, presents a choice array of matter for all classes of readers. On our first page we present the usual variety of Editorial Notes, Humorous selections, State Items, Neighborhood and County news, and a general miscellany. On our local and editorial pages will be found comments, items, and current news, with quite full accounts of the president's dangerous condition. A full foreign and local market corrected up to Thursday morning, is also another valuable feature. We aim to make this absolutely correct.

Our inside pages present over twenty-five solid columns of general reading, condensed news, a splendid continued story, poetry, a letter by Nasby, current politics, etc. Look the paper over, show it to your friends and ask them to subscribe.

The President.

The condition of the President is fully shown by the dispatches which we publish in this issue. Since Saturday but little hope have been entertained of his recovery. Tuesday night he was thought to be in a dying condition, but he rallied slightly Wednesday morning. At the present writing he seems to be wavering between life and death. We can only hope as to the result. Our news columns contain the very latest up to the hour of going to press.

Very few people object to the price of the Graphic, $1.50 per year, but let those who do turn through it, mark its size and the quantity and variety of its reading matter, and they will find it contains more than twice as much as any of the $1.00 or $1.25 around here hence it is the cheapest as well as the best paper in North Missouri.

A discussion is going on in France as to the discoverer of the artificial incubator; the Egyptians hatched eggs in the sun and others by means of boiling water; but it was only in 1873 that the idea was practically solved by M. Rouiller, who, instead of obtaining only seven per cent of chicks, secures seventy by his hatching. He employs 80 workmen to supply orders for the latter, and despatches forty thousand chicks yearly, in batches of 25,000, and 100 by rail and to every part of Europe. The incubators are estimated to supply 15,000,000 of barn yard fowls annually to the market.

Manufactures.

The last issue of the Canton Press contains some pertinent suggestions on this topic applicable to that locality, to the effect that those industries which have already formed a start should be fostered and encouraged and built up. We have by no means yet abandoned the hope of getting up a boom in this line for Kirksville. Centrally located, with cross railroads, fine timber, cheap coal, and a good population surrounding us, there is but one solitary reason why a number of manufacturing enterprises should not be started here with reasonable hopes of success—and that only reason is the indifference of our people. Let that be overcome and the rest would be easy.

Secretary Blaine says there are less than 100,000 offices of every grade and character in the government, and that for these there are on file in the department over 1,600,000 applications. These striking figures indicate the enormous labor devolving upon the appointing power, and the vast importance of a change in the system of appointments to the service which does the common work of the people. They also show a deplorable weakness for office on the part of a million people in this Nation, which ought not to be in these prosperous times.

The new Commissioner of Agriculture seemingly proposes to build up his own reputation on the ruins of his predecessor. There is scarce any thing that Mr. Le Duc did that Mr. Loring is not trying to undo. Le Duc's tea farm is pronounced a failure and a fraud, his corn and sorgham experiments bunglingly and wastefully conducted, and his artesian well fund uselessly squandered. Perhaps, however, when Loring's windmills cease blowing the dust, the public may get a glimpse of what he is doing, or proposes to do, for the agricultural interests of the country.—Farmer's Review

Too Many Doctors.

The manner in which the President lingers is a mystery not only to the people in general, but to the medical men of the country. It seems that his condition should have been better by this time. And though he has had the advice of as good surgical talent as there is in the land, there is distrust in the minds of many, and a feeling that things might have been better. It seems like a grave charge to even intimate that men would allow jealousies to affect their action in the treatment of a case like that of President Garfield; but that such is the case, many are already convinced. The people yet well remember the jealousies that existed among the Union Generals, and how they fought each other during the earlier years of the late war, and the result of these contests. It seems to be gall and bitterness to the less successful for one man to gain a reputation above another in the army, in the medical profession, and even in the church, as well as other vocations. At the bedside of the wounded President are a number of physicians, and they must agree before any course of treatment can be followed; each has his theory and remedy, and a compromise must be made, or the remainder yield to the stronger will of the one, and the consequence is that the course pursued is probably not quite satisfactory to either of the attending physicians. Each would like to have the reputation of being in charge of the illustrious patient, and neither is willing to stand back and let another take the lead, hence the patient is, in a measure, left without any uniform and rational course of treatment. There is an old saying that "too many cooks spoil the broth." If they would dismiss all the doctors but one, and then let him call in what assistance he might ask, the probabilities are the President would soon be better. The life of the President of the United States should not be left in the hands of men who are calous of each other.

Giteau and the Guard.

WASHINGTON, AUG. 17.—This morning, at 4:30 o'clock, while Mr. C. McGill, one of the guards at the jail, was passing through the corridor, something in the appearance of Giteau's cell attracted his attention. Entering the cell he found the assassin in the possession of a knife. How he obtained it is a mystery. When he demanded the knife Giteau refused to surrender it. Mr. McGill drew his pistol and then an exciting tussle ensued, Giteau making every exertion to get the pistol from the guard. He succeeded after a struggle, but Mr. McGill after the most strenuous exertion, regained possession of it. In the scuffle that followed, the weapon was discharged, and the report brought the other guards to the assistance of McGill, and Giteau was finally disarmed. He had succeeded, however, in cutting McGill's clothing pretty badly, and came very near inflicting a dangerous wound. Giteau pretended to be crazy, and complained that his pistol had been taken from him. All the facts indicate that Giteau was probably meditating escape, and that he had formed some desperate plan. His assumption of insanity is believed to be a dodge, as he has acted as if perfectly sane all along.

Intense Anxiety in Gotham.

NEW YORK, August 16.—The anxiety in this city over the condition of the President is hourly increasing and the streets in the immediate vicinity of the various newspaper offices are thronged with thoughtful-looking men in search of the latest news from the Presidential sick-chamber. On Printing-house square and Park Row and Wall street the excitement is most noticeable. The telegraph offices are besieged by anxious seekers after some consoling news from Washington, but an ominous silent shaking of the head and the sad look of the majority denote a feeling of uneasiness, painful to witness.

The Bulletins tell the Story.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Aug. 17.—Previous to the mid day dressing Dr. Agnew was asked the condition of the President, to which he replied: "He is better to-day." When questioned further the doctor said: "There is nothing further to say than is contained in the bulletin." The doctor was pressed for a reply to the question as to whether he considered that the patient had an equal chance for recovery. He said: "It is a bad plan to speculate on the chances. The bulletin tells the story that the President is better to-day. Good morning."

The Murderous Apaches.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., August 16.—A rancho fifteen miles east of Elita was burned and one woman and a boy killed by the Apaches. The report of the destruction of the village and the massacre of the inhabitant near Rio Paerco is untrue. We have reliable reports that in all twenty Mexican and one soldier have been killed and one white woman captured by the Indians since the 10th inst. No damage by the Indians is reported within fifty miles of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad. Quite a number of ranchmen are moving together for safety.

SLOWLY BUT SURELY.

President Garfield is Sinking Day by Day.

WASHINGTON, August 16.—The 1 o'clock bulletin stated that President had not rallied from the exhaustion of yesterday as the surgeons had hoped. Pulse 114, temperature 98.3, respiration 18. The bulletin says the President had a tranquil morning and had not vomited since the morning Bulletin. The morning bulletin stated that he had not vomited since 3 a. m. and the 1 o'clock bulletin, taken in connection with that, implies that he had vomited this morning at 11 o'clock. The surgeons thought they could determine by 1 p. m. whether the President would live or not; that if the temperature went down and the pulse kept up it would be a sign of death. At that hour the pulse stood 126. After that the pulse receded some, but the temperature has gone down 3-10. The surgeons do not say anything now but it is evident they entertain little if any hope. The fall of the temperature, though light, is regarded as serious and foreboding the worst results. It is true the pulse has fallen some, but the temperature has now gone below normal, which is a most dangerous symptom. The President's stomach still refuses all nourishment. Food injections have only been partially successful, but life cannot long be sustained in this manner. The surgeons stick closely to the patient, watching every movement and hoping for some favorable turn. From all information to be obtained, it can be stated that the chance of the President's recovery is very slim. The surgeons do not give up the case, and that is about the best that can be said. The President does not rally. He remains about the same apparently, and nothing can be done to impart any strength. All that the people can do is to hope. There is not much in the case now to base hope upon. A spirit of despondency has now invaded the Executive Mansion.

A Day of Suspense.

NEW YORK, August 16.—A special to the Evening Post says: Washington, August 16, 7:20 a. m.—The President still lives and hopes are cherished that he will yet recover. The trouble is entirely with the stomach. If his powers are not gone, recovery is yet possible. The President passed a comfortable night, except that he was troubled by retching. About 3 o'clock this morning he slept well without the aid of morphia. Dr. Ellis Bliss says the physicians have been troubled by his stomach from the beginning and have from the first treated it with great care. If it can rest now by the administration of nourishment by injections it may possibly be able to resume its functions before exhaustion gets too great to be overcome. To-day will probably be a day of suspense rather than of incident. The President is disposed to sleep, and nothing will be done unnecessarily to disturb him.

Prepare for the Worst.

NEW YORK, August 16.—The Post's Washington special says: Dr. Ellis Bliss says regarding the President's condition, the stomach is now resting, and if the strength of the patient can be sustained by injection till the digestive organs recover, it is possible for him to get well. "Of course," said the doctor, "if the stomach has given out, that ends it. This cannot yet be known. Until the facts appear we must watch and wait. If he passes the day without vomiting and his pulse falls in rapidity and gains in firmness we may hope that he will yet be spared. If the retching continues and the pulse shows no mending, the public should understand that the end is probably near. Some members of the Cabinet have seen the physicians, and Postmaster-General James has always been most hopeful and buoyant. He said this morning that the information he received made him feel somewhat more easy than he did yesterday, but the expression of his face was not one of hope. There was a weary anxious look about it, far less reassuring than his words. Attorney-General MacVeagh has always been despondent. He is not more sanguine this morning. His face bears an expression of hopelessness. He informed a friend that he did not expect the President would recover. He did not change his views after the interview with the physicians this morning. It has been supposed that the Attorney-General reflected the views of his friend Dr. Agnew, but he says his views are only his own. The surgeons are more hopeful.

The Enemata.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, August 17.—In conversation this morning on the President's condition Dr. Boynton said the prospects were considerably brighter and that the patient is resting comfortably. In reply to inquiry the Doctor explained that the enemata which were being administered consisted principally of diluted extract of beef, a yolk of egg and some whisky, the whole being dissolved and slightly heated. Dr. Bliss in conversation on the same subject stated that a small portion of muriatic acid was also a part of the enemata. The latter gentleman expressed the opinion that the President's stomach was gradually becoming stronger. The Doctor still remains hopeful and says there is no reason for giving the President's case up yet.

Dr. Boynton, in response to a question regarding the President's taking nourishment in a regular manner, said it was possible that a very small quantity of diluted beef extract, probably a teaspoonful, would be given him about noon. It would depend, however, upon the patient's condition at that hour. He has not been troubled with nausea since yesterday afternoon, at which time he threw off about a gill of liquid matter containing a quantity of bile. Dr. Boynton says Mrs. Garfield feels rather more encouraged to-day than yesterday.

Once More Hopeful.

WASHINGTON, August 17.—The President is undoubtedly better this morning, and high hopes are entertained of his recovery. The nausea from which he has been suffering was evidently produced by the ether administered at the last operation. The stomach seems now to have recovered from the excessive weakness, and the doctors confidently expect the president to be able by evening to take nourishment into the stomach. The feeling here about the President is now hopeful. In an interview this morning Dr. Bliss was asked if there was anything in the President's condition indicating pyæmia or blood poisoning as the cause of the President's unfavorable symptoms. He answered emphatically in the negative, and said that there was no connection whatever between the wound and the present troubles; that the unfavorable symptoms were due entirely to the condition of the patient's stomach, and himself and the other attending surgeons were confident that the treatment adopted would soon remedy this. In speaking of the President's appearance he said that when he was shot he weighed 210 pounds, but his confinement has reduced this nearly 70 pounds. There was of course some pallor, but as he wore a full beard this was not so perceptible as it would otherwise be. Secretary Blaine has been telegraphed that the President is better.

GREENTOP GRAPHICS.

GREENTOP, Aug. 16.—The wife of John Turk died on Thursday morning of last week at 5 o'clock, at her residence in this place. She died from consumption, from which she had been suffering for several months. She was in her 22 year and leaves a husband and three children. She was a member of the Christian church. Her remains were buried at this cemetery on Friday. Her funeral was preached Sunday at 11 o'clock at the Lewis Grove, near the school house, by Rev. Davis, being largely attended. She was a daughter G. W. Bailey, of Iowa, who has been here for several days during her last illness. He returned to his home on Monday last, taking with him the three children, which was at the request of his deceased daughter.

Our post office was moved last week to W. S. Gatlin's store.

M. Speer, Jeff Dyer and Geo. Pryor have just returned from a trip to the west part of the state where they have been looking out a location. Jeff Dyer purchased a farm in Harrison county Mo., of two hundred acres, for which he paid ten dollars per acre. They report corn and oats crop in Harrison county as looking fine.

H. Gatlin and wife moved to Moravia, Iowa, on Monday last. We are sorry to lose them. They were good citizens and we wish them success in their new home.

T. P. Loedman is in town last week collecting rail road taxes. Some of our farmers are grumbling and say the rail road tax is equal to the James boy's robbery.

We had a good rain on Saturday last. It had been needed for some time.

A Decline in Stocks.

NEW YORK, August 16, 11 a. m.—The alarming news regarding the President's condition cast a gloom over Wall street which was reflected in the heavy tone of the stock market. Speculation opened weak, and under very pronounced pressure to sell, the entire list recorded a short decline, running from 1/2 to 3/4 Texas Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, Canada Southern, Kansas & Texas, Hannibal & St. Joe, Reading Union Pacific, Wabash and Pacific and Nashville & Chattanooga eading downward movement.

Here is a fact well stated by one of the greatest of Englishmen, Lord Erskine: "I never knew a man remarkable for heroic bravery whose very aspect was not lighted up by gentleness and humanity; nor a kill-him-and-kill-him countenance that did not cover the heart of a bully or a poltroon."

MAKING MILLIONS HAPPY.

The Remarkable Scheme of Uncle Rufus Hatch—A Wonderful Discovery.

From the New York Sun.

"I've been thinking of the recent decisions of our favoring monopolies," said Uncle Rufus Hatch yesterday. "Some of them seem to think the monopolies are blessings in disguise. May be they are. I don't know. But if they are, they will eventually solve the problem of civil-service reform, making child's play of the science of government, and revolutionize every acre of the Union. Trade and commerce, mining and manufactures, morals are all made out. All we have to do is to hold down all public and private enterprises in the crucible of consolidation. What a big thing for the world it would be if all the railroads were consolidated into one company! Only think what a blessing to have only one dime museum, one tailor, and one axle-grease manufactory! We could have one tooth-brush maker, one single insect powder mill, and one manufacturer of artificial eyes. My, but it would be a great blessing!"

Here Uncle Rufus placed his feet on the round of his chair and began to fan himself. "We would have one grand boarding-house," he continued, "one saw-mill and one shooting gallery. There would be a huge hair-pin factory, and one tremendous shop for the manufacture of pocket watches. (One importer could supply the country with savings casings and curled hair. We would have one iron foundry and one homeopathic medicine factory; one banking house and one boot-blacking establishment; one landscape architect and one junk dealer; one kerosene mill, one whiskey rectifier, and one favoring extract establishment. My, my what a blessing it would be!"

Uncle Rufus dropped his feet from the round of his chair and eagerly bent forward. "Only think how happy we should be," said he. "We would have not one electric light company and only one razor-strop establishment; one great college and one immense Chinese laundry; one museum of art and one grand peanut stand; one brewery, one beer saloon, and one manufacturer of wooden toothpicks. The more you look at it the happier you become. Only think of having only one President, one Senator, one member of Congress, one candidate, and one vote. It's enough to make a man dance with delight to think that there would be only one Court, one Judge, one lawyer, one detective and one jail. We could have one soldier, one sailor one Custom House, and one stock-broker. There would be but one farm, one potato patch and one onion field. This would dumbfound the Irish. Then we should have one editor, one reporter, one newspaper, and one lunatic asylum. Oh, it would be tremendously gloriously tremendous!"

Here Uncle Rufus again hitched the heels of his Oxford ties on the round of his chair and fanned himself vigorously. "There would be but one orthodox preacher," he continued; "his sermon would be telephoned by one telephone to every church in the county. Everything would be done by clock-work, and every man and woman would be sure to hear a good sermon. We could build the Mutual, the Automatic, and Rapid Transit telegraph lines down with the Western Union, and make everybody supremely happy. Then we might have one hand-organ, one hay-entter, jews-harp, one pedestrian, and one negro minstrel. My, but it would be wonderfully pleasing, if not pleasingly wonderful."

"Of course," said Uncle Rufus, "such a universal consolidation would shake up the dry bones. There would be a precious scattering of great titles. Many a bank president would return to his post as office boy, and many a railroad President would again become a clerk. Many a telegraph king might be compelled to climb his poles for a living, and many a dry goods dealer might become a cash boy. You might hear a statesman crying 'Hot corn' or 'clams' and you might see many a real-estate owner flourishing a pick or a shovel. Many an editor would go to killing hogs, and many a steamboat monarch would spend the remainder of his days on the deck of a canal boat. Many a lawyer would begin to polish the handle of the big front door, many a doctor might begin to develop muscle in other directions than making bills, and many a clergyman might sell pines and molasses candy. It is a gigantic undertaking, and of course it will meet some opposition, but all right minded and dispassionate men would approve of it if things go on as they are now going. It's judiciously political if not politically judicious."

"But the most glorious part of 'this glorious scheme,'" labbed Uncle Rufus, "is yet to come. Everything could be consolidated into one great head, and controlled by one great master mind. The nation and the whole world might be kept moving in perfect accord with astounding, if not astoundingly miraculous, accuracy."

"But where could you find a man, capable of filling such a position?" we asked.

"Hush," whispered Uncle Rufus. "I've found the very man. Nature molded him for this very place. In honesty of purpose, intelligence, morality, benevolence, talent, and beauty of face and figure, he is unequalled. His innocent simplicity gives him unsoiled popularity. Best of all, he has had his head examined by the phenologists, with most wonderful results. They have given him a certificate that ought to satisfy the world. Every man must have his head examined and pass this same ordeal before civil service reform is an accomplished fact."

"But who is this wonderful man?" we asked.

"Jay Gould," was the reply, and you may add that Russet Sage entirely agrees with me. It's truly remarkable if not remarkably true."

James Starbird, husband of the postmistress at the Richmond & Lexington junction Ray county, has been arrested for pilfering from the mails. His thefts are $600 in varying sums. Mrs. S. is not implicated, but S. has been rather a "bad egg."
