HARLAN BROS.

Right at Last.

The other day while passing along the west side of the square, I heard the following conversation:

Say! Adams, where did you get that new suit of cloths?

"At the New York Store. There is where I do all my trading. It only cost me $12.50. They asked me every other place $18.00 for exactly the same goods. You can get an all wool suit for $5.00 and boy's suits for $3.00."

"Well, John, I am going to try them. I always heard they sold goods very cheap."

He is right, you bet.

Laces Laces.

In addition to our immense stock of Laces and Hamburg edgings, we have a new stock of lace remnants put up in pieces of from 2 to 10 yds., sold at 10 cts. a bunch which is less than half price at HARLAN BROS.

Call and leave your measure with H. Grau at Kinnear & Eckers, for a fine boot or shoe. Repairing done to order promptly. He is a first class workman.

THE ARABS ARE COMING!

A HUMAN PYRAMID BY A TROUPE OF BORN ATHLETES.

Sinewy Sons of the Desert,

Born Athletes, brought from the Orient to astound Americans by their remarkable performances.

REAL ARABS!

Fresh from the land of Romance, and noted for their phenomenal feats of strength, heroic horsemanship, athletic accomplishments, and extraordinary native sports, introducing the famous LAB-EL-BARBER, or powder play of the Arabian warriors, and posing in towering pyramids.

Their arrival in New York City, by the White Star Line of steamers, dates April 7th, 1883, and the unusual interest with which they have been received clearly demonstrates that

They are the FEATURE OF FEATURES.

Broadway literally blocked, and the press of New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, and every city through which they pass, teeming with interesting accounts of their peculiar traits of character, muscular development, and intellectual appearance. Yezily, they are MOHAMMEDIAN MARVELS, whose thrilling exhibitions have never had a parallel, illustrating every phase of Arab life as it actually exists, and giving a series of performances utterly unlike anything heretofore seen. Agile and dexterous to the verge of all human possibility, they build lofty pyramids with their supple forms piled one upon the other, leap over lines of fixed bayonets, somersault over high objects with swords and daggers in hand, drive a ready lance through strong obstacles, give minute scenes of Arabian Warfare, as practiced by the wild Bedouins, and picture in life-like reality all the features of the Harem, halts in the deserts, etc., clad in native costume and mounted on real Kalmuck Camels. An amazing spectacle, yet only one item among 5,000 features in
