at the great Southern Methodist camp meeting in St. Louis. The old-time Methodist shout was to be beard at all the services. The ring of halle-lujahs and exclamations of "Glöry," min-gled with coronels, guitars, banjos, tamborines, concerlinas and drums; filled the woodland with a solemnity and merriment never to be forgotten by the thousands who either looked on from mere curlosity or entered luito the spirit of the occasion. The music was on the Salvation style, but was exceptionally good Many solos were sung, such as I'm living in Canagan now.

The great shout of the morning was by an old colored woman, who became so happy that she took the meeting into her own hands and marched up and down the aisles, crying in a loud voice: "Yes. I love everybody—I love yees, even if ye is white." She carried out the spirit of her deciaration by grasp-ing many of the derout and giving them a sound hugging. Ensign McAbee said in the opening services that there were Meth-edists. Presbyterians, Baptists and Episco-palians present, and she thanked God that even the Episcopalians were getting as noisy as the Salvationists. Says a Washington special: Thos. H. Benton's spring is in danger. Fifty ears ago "Old Bullion" found that the water f a spring in Columbia Heights, 2 miles to the northward of the capitol, was most pleasing to the kidneys. He got a bill through congress to have a pipe laid from the spring to the west front of the capitol. A drinking fountain was established just at the door of the capitol, and there Senator Benton stopped every morning o drink slowly and deeply. It was while taking one of his regular drinks at this fountain that the Missourian delivered his senthing commentary on the newspaper correspondents. He was in the act of raising the cup to his lips when the correspondent who had written with considerable freedom of something Mr. Benton had done, came up.

"Good morning, senator," he said, "Don't you dare to speak to me." roared Mr. Benton, putting down his cup, "you--" And then followed such a string of expletives and curses as made the scene memorable. The spring water has run at the capitol entrance to this day, and the historical incident is still emembered and rehearsed.

 several weeks ago. He is now here in the county jail. His confession was made on the train en route to this city. A MURDERER TURNED LOOSE TO HELP. Wilson says that it is true that a murderer out of the El Paso jail was allowed to help put tar and feathers on the adjutant-general, and that among the main movers in the movement were the sheriff himself, Deputy Sheriff J. R. Wilson, Deputy Bob Mullins, Capt. Saxton of Troop A, J. Sherman Crumley, Walter Crumley, William Bancroft, of Troop A, and others. WILSON, TOGETHER WITH PARK, who has also confessed, will be brought before the grand jury, which is now sitting at Colorado Springs. Both men are very fearful that the public will see fit to take the law in their own hands and punish them without waiting for the law to adjudge the guilty. No trouble, however, is expected by the police. THE CONSPIRACY is said to have originated at Gillette, upon the report of an alleged remark on the part of Tarsney to the effect that he hoped every man in Bowers' army would be shipped home in a coffin. The plans were laid and freely discussed in the sheriff's office. A signal was agreed on, which was to be the sticking of the right hand in the vest pocket, and a meeting was called and held in a near-by saloon. It is claimed that SHERIFF BOWERS FURNISHED THE TAR.

while Mrs. Quackenboss skilfully arranged the feathers, destroying one of the pillows belonging to one of her best spare rooms to secure them. The crowd went from their meeting to the Alamo hotel in carriages, which were secured by one of the deputies. Everything was conducted calmly, deliberately, and there was no noise to draw suspicion. Wilson says that the party was led by himself, and that he was the one who POKED THE GUN UNDER TARSNEY'S FACE when he came down to the office to answer a telephone call. Three other men went into the hotel office. After Tarsney was secured and joined the riding party quiet was changed to tumult, and it looked as if the adjutantgeneral had not much longer to live. He was even told that his time had come and he was going to die. They proposed killing him by

FIRST CHOPPING HIS HEAD OFF and then quartering him with a large and keen butcher knife, the edge of which he was asked to feel. All this was firmly believed by the adjutant, who was resigned to his supposed fate. When he was finally told that he was not going to be killed he was so relieved that he shook hands with his persecutors and thanked them over and over for sparing his life.

The disclosures of Wilson have created a great sensation here.

-"My business," said an up-town west sider, "takes me down town on the Sixth avenue elevated road on Saturday afternoons between twelve and one o'clock. A month ago I found the cars pretty well filled at that hour; now I find them pretty nearly empty; sometimes between some stations l have a car all to myself; the guard looks in and calls the station to me alone. But if I look across to the up track I see the trains there running crowded or well filled; then I begin to realize that this is midsummer, the scason of the Saturday half holiday."-N. Y. Sun.

-Perhaps the most noticeable blos som of one particular fraction of the summer is the milk weed. The flowers individually beautiful in shape, grow in hemispherical clusters, and, thus massed, are especially rich. The color is often a reddish pink, very unusual in natural blossoms. The broken stem exudes a viscous milky fluid, that sticks to the fingers in gluey, unpleasant lashon --- N. Y. Sun.
