INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 4.—At 3:30 o'clock a. m. fire started in the building occupied by the Indiana medical college, at the corner of South Pennsylvania and Maryland streets. In a few minutes the whole building was in flames, and the efforts of the fire department to head them off were without avail. The fire quickly spread to the Scottish Rite building adjoining.

THE FINEST MASONIC PARAPHEMALLIA in the west was reduced to ashes. This outfit had but recently been purchased, and the estimated loss to the masons by reason of its destruction, together with the five-story building and all the other contents, will reach $100,000. The building had been occupied by the Indiana medical college, the medical college having the two floors above. Every section of this structure was leveled to the ground.

A GHASTLY FEATURE OF THE DISASTER was the fact that eighteen bodiless stoves in vats for dissecting purposes were scattered about the streets of burning human flesh was nauseating. The bones of the cadavers dropped into the cellar and presented a sickly spectacle. The fire was still burning at nine o'clock. The total loss is about $175,000, and the insurance, exclusive of that on contents, $60,000.

RUMOR OF A MAN BURNED. Persons who witnessed the fire say that a man appeared at one of the upper windows of the medical college building, and that he went down with the roof and floors when they collapsed and tumbled into the basement. At 10 o'clock, however, the body had not been found, and if it should be, it is very doubtful whether it could be distinguished from the charred bodies of the eighteen cadavers that went down with the ruins at the same time. No missing men have been reported, and it is hardly believed that any lives were lost.

HEAVY FIGHTING.

In the Country Just North of Port Arthur, in Which the Japanese Win Again—Kincho, a Walled Town, Captured After a Few Hours of Vigorous Attack—Fallen—Importing—Court-Martial During the Year.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 4.—Advices received here from the front show that there has been heavy fighting in the country just north of Port Arthur. The dispatches received are brief and are silent on some important points. It appears that Field Marshal Oyama divided his forces. While one division landed on the east coast of the peninsula north of Tallienwan, another division was detached, with orders to proceed thence and join the main body of the army.

This operation was a complete success. The Japanese encountered no Chinese war ships, and the transports reached Kincho and disembarked troops, guns, horses and munitions in safety. Kincho, which is a walled town, and which was believed to be held by a large garrison, was immediately attacked. The outer defenses were carried by the Japanese after a few hours' fighting. The Chinese made little further resistance, and the Japanese were soon masters of the place.

Yesterday was the sixty-second anniversary of the birth of the Mikado. There was great public rejoicing over the victory, thus far won by the Japanese army.

Up to the time of sending this dispatch there has been no confirmation of the report of the capture of Port Arthur.

A dispatch to the Times from Tientsin says: Fen Huan Chen has been burned. The Chinese fleet of Mongolia has collapsed. Cold weather has commenced and snow has fallen in Manchuria. The Japanese cleverly landed at Pitow while making a demonstration off the coast of Shanghai and cut the wires, thus preventing the news of their position reaching the Chinese. The admiral of the Chinese fleet with four vessels besides torpedo boats afterwards started to attack them but was recalled. Prince Kung, the emperor's uncle, has been appointed dictator, thus indicating the further centralization of authority. The Manchurian princes favor reforms, but the Chinese oppose them.

All taverns in Moscow have been closed. A mob has been in front of Dr. Zacharin's house all day shouting that it is a poisoner and the murderer of the czar.
