Killed by a Thresher.

A terrible accident, which resulted in the death of Mr. Cord Weinberg Wednesday morning, happened while threshing wheat upon his farm six miles south of Blackburn Tuesday morning. Mr. Weinberg was throwing wheat into the thresher, when his left arm got caught in the belting, lifting him from the ground with a whirling motion, and terribly lacerating the flesh and ligaments, before the machine could be stopped. Amputation was the only chance to save his life, and the arm was taken off at the shoulder joint by Dr. G. A. Richard, Tuesday afternoon, but death relieved him of his sufferings on Wednesday morning. Mr. Weinberg was a wealthy German farmer, and leaves a wife and several children. He was buried Thursday. The thresher was owned by Lemon Brothers.—Blackburn Record.

Dog Saved Building.

The alarm of fire was given at about 6 o'clock Monday evening. The blaze was on the second floor of Dr. Koch's drug store, and a worthless cur, which is known principally because of fighting abilities and proclivities, was the cause of it being discovered. At about 2 o'clock Monday afternoon Peter Kirch, who had his hand severely injured some time ago, came up to Dr. Koch's office to have it dressed. The physician lighted a gasoline stove for the purpose of heating water but the fire blazed up so high that he was obliged to carry it out. He took it through a store room in the rear, and down the back stairs, and it is supposed a spark was dropped. At about six o'clock Dr. Koch had a call to the country, and, not desiring to have the dog follow him, took him up stairs with the purpose of locking him in the back room. When he opened the door a great volume of smoke poured into his face, and he immediately gave the alarm of fire.

The dog in the case was only the very indirect cause of the fire's discovery, but Dr. Koch says he will make no further efforts to rid himself of him, but will give him a home hereafter.—Maryville Tribune.

McClure's Magazine for September.

McClure's Magazine for September opens with a poem on the Dreyfus affair by Edwin Markham which proves that the mark reached by Mr. Markham in "The Man with the Hoe" was not beyond his reaching again. It is truly a high and noble strain which he strikes here, exhibiting in apt, strong, rhythmic phrase the finer, universal import of the most singular episode of recent history. Following this comes a character sketch of Admiral Sampson, by Ray Stannard Baker, giving many interesting incidents and anecdotes of the Admiral's life as boy and young man in his home town of Palmyra, New York, and estimates and reminiscences of him by his associates in the navy. It is illustrated with a series of portraits of Sampson and various other pictures.

There are half a dozen good, strong interesting stories in the number, including a true story of army life by Capt. F. E. Brady and a true story of railroad life by C. S. Warrman.
