THE GRAND JURY.

The grand jury for this term of the Criminal Court are: B. J. Orear, foreman; W. H. Baker, E. M. Haynie, Charles F. Yancey, Riley Johnson, J. Matt Sphar, Jacob VanDyke, J. W. Sparks, F. M. Yagle, Willis Arnold, W. M. Tyler and J. P. Foree.

MISSOURI CLUB WOMEN.

Some of the women's clubs in various parts of the country are misinformed about the proposed "hall of philanthropy" at the St. Louis World's Fair. The idea originated with Miss Mary E. Perry, of this city, and was first submitted to the public in a communication to the Globe-Democrat printed May 5 last. It is a mistake to suppose that the special and general interests of women's clubs were overlooked in the project. Miss Perry wrote: "As we shall be the hostesses of the visiting club women who come to participate with us in the celebration of the Louisiana purchase, it will be incumbent upon us to erect a building in which to entertain them. After this building has served this purpose and the World's Fair has closed, would it not be fitting, as we wish the women's building to be a permanent memorial and altruistic in character, to convert it into a 'hall of philanthropy,' which should be a school of instruction and an epitome of the latest and most advanced thought along the lines of charities and corrections." The building would be of permanent use to the women's clubs of the country, and most conveniently located for their general meetings. The value of the idea to the women's clubs of the entire country will grow upon examination. It broadens their distinctive work.

PURE FOOD.

What is considered the strictest pure food law in the United States has gone into effect in New Jersey. Its enforcement is intrusted to the state board of health. A chief food inspector, with a sufficient number of deputies distributed throughout the state, is authorized to examine everything used for human consumption as food or drink, no matter where produced. Beverages must reach a certain standard, and municipal water supplies, if impure, are subject to condemnation. The penalties apply to the manufacture or sale of anything to eat or drink that is not pure.

MISSOURI STATUTES.

The statutes of Missouri provide that the published reports of state auditors shall be "full and detailed," but Gov. Dockery says "these reports do not include all the state's financial transactions" and that "this must be apparent to the merest tyro in bookkeeping." It does not take a tyro long to discover that the state constitution and statutes count for nothing in the ringster bookkeeping at Jefferson City.

A BOYS IDEA OF THE HEATHEN.

A Slatertown youngster sends in the following composition on the "heathen:"

"We send missionaries across the Ocean to convert the heathen. The heathen don't want to be converted; so, when they're hungry and the canned goods has run out, they eat the missionaries and have appendicitis and go to sleep in the sun. And when they are short of money to go to the Circus with they try to sell us the missionaries at so much apiece. Most of the heathen that come to this country are washin' shirts and collars are goin' to Sunday school and talking' so you can't understand 'em. They is so many heathen in this country that we're afraid to tackle 'em; so we send folks across the sea to pick out a few and write back home that they're doin' as well as can be expected, and pray for 'em fore the heathen git hungry."

WOMEN NOTARIES PUBLIC.

A lively controversy seems to have arisen in some quarters as to who was the first woman notary public in Missouri and the assertion was made that it is a rare instance when a female notary public is found in Missouri. Secretary of State Sam B. Cook was asked about the matter to-day and said:

"I do not know now who was the first woman commissioned a notary public in Missouri, but there are numerous instances on record where women have been commissioned for this office in the state. Hardly a week passes but that some woman of Missouri is commissioned a notary public by this office and some weeks two or three women are commissioned notaries public. There is nothing remarkable nowadays in finding notaries public in Missouri who are women."

MISSOURI TAMMANY NEXT.

"The Missouri Tammany next," says the Springfield (Mo.) Republican. A large majority of the people of the state ought to indorse that proposition. The old ring is tottering under its load of discrepancies and the proofs of its sale of legislatures for blocks of campaign cash.

BIG PRICE FOR HOGS.

Mr. F. M. Lail, of Marshall, has sold during the last sixty days 48 head of hogs at an average of $80 per head. With the exception of two. They were all raised this year. Mr. Lail is conceded to be the most successful breeder of fine hogs in the country.
