Stock Market.

Receipts of cattle this week have been extremely heavy, but very few southern cattle in receipts. The run was principally natives, but the quality was very poor. The demand was extra good for the strictly prime heavy cattle and the top sales this week was 8 1-4. This class of cattle was full steady with any time last week. All other cattle 15 to 25c lower. We also had a liberal run of yearling steers which sold from $7.25 to $7.65. One bunch of heavy choice yearlings weighing 1100 lbs reached $3.10. The top on the heifers for the week was 7c a pound. The demand held up good on this class as there were not any too many in the receipts and all classes of cows are full steady with the best time of last week. There were no stockers and feeders included in our receipts this week to speak of and the inquiry was much better than at any time in the past 60 days. We look for a lighter run the balance of the week and expect our market to get a little better towards the close. Receipts of hogs have been extremely heavy. In fact the first three days of the week have equalled any week in the history of the yards. Our market is 25 to 40c higher than any other market on the light hogs, which have suffered a decline. Our top Monday being 9.75 for the pigs, today 9.25. The top on the strictly choice heavy hogs today is 8.60. This class was selling at 8.90 Monday. The 200 to 220 lbs. hogs are selling from 8.90 to 9c. This class would have brought 9.25 to 9.35 at the opening Monday. We look for this market to continue getting lower, as there does not seem any way possible to check this break. The sheep market also suffered a decline this week. The top lambs selling today at 6.85 which is fully 65c lower than the opening of Monday. The best mutton sheep are selling from 4 to 4 1-2. Cull lambs 4 to 4 1-2. We expect to have lighter runs the balance of the week and do not look for any reaction in them. Yours truly, DRAGGON, BECKER & CO. National Stock Yards, Ill., June 13.

When John Brown Wouldn't. Pol-Maneur is a favorite cast near Balmoral castle and was always held as the special preserve of John Brown, who was the personal attendant of the late Queen Victoria. John was an enthusiastic and inveterate fisher, and often the royal horder was indebted to his prowess for its supplies of spring salmon when the rods of the other fishermen failed to bring them to the bank. It is authentically reported among anglers on Deeside that when the queen wanted John he was immediately at her call except when angling, and at such times she would not disturb him. The tacit understanding between them is said to have arisen in the following fashion: Her majesty one day sent an imperative message to the river side desiring John to immediately wait upon her. "Tell her majesty," replied John in his usual Doric, "that I am rinnin' a salmon and I canna come." The messenger came back to him in hot haste, saying that the queen desired to see him the very minute. "Well, tell her majesty this time that I am rinnin' a salmon and I winna come." And that settled it.

Albatross and Magpie. Birds play a great part in good and bad auguries at sea. The albatross is regarded as a harbinger of good fortune and has been immortalized as such by Coleridge in "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner," whereas the magpie is a bad omen.

A friend of Sir Walter Scott, traveling by coach to London, entered into a conversation with a respectable looking seaman, who remarked: "I wish we may have luck in our journey. There's a magpie."

"And why should that be unlucky?" "I can't tell you that, but all the world agrees one magpie bodes ill luck, two are not so bad, but three are the evil one himself. I never saw three magpies, but twice, and once I nearly lost my vessel, and afterward I fell from my horse and was hurt."

Many seamen still believe in water spirits or sprites. In Bohemia the fishermen are afraid to assist a drowning man for fear of giving offense to the water sprite.

QUEER INDIAN BELIEFS.

The Five Worlds of the Bella Coola Sun Worshipers. There is an odd feature in the theology of the small Indian tribe of the Bella Coola which inhabit British Columbia in about latitude 52. They believe that there are five worlds, one above the other, and the middle one is our own world, the earth. Above it are two heavens, and under it are two underworlds. In the upper heaven is the supreme deity, who is a woman, and she doesn't meddle much with the affairs in the second world below her. The zenith is the center of the lower heaven, and here is the house of the gods, in which live the sun and the rest of the deities. Our own earth is believed to be an island swimming in the ocean. The first underworld from the earth is inhabited by ghosts, who can return, when they wish, to heaven, from which place they may be sent down to our earth. If then they misbehave again they are cast into the lower of the underworlds, and from this bourn no ghostly traveler returns. The Bella Coola are sun worshipers. For Senex, the sun, the master of the house of gods, who is called the father and the sacred one, is the only deity to whom the tribe pray. Each family of the Bella Coola has its own traditions and its own form of the current traditions, so that in the mythology of the tribe there are countless contradictions. When any one not a member of a clan tries to tell a tradition which does not belong to his clan it is like a white man trying to tell another's joke—he is considered as appropriating the property right which does not belong to him.

SMOKELESS POWDER.

It Came Through Experimenting For High Explosives. The idea is very general that smokeless powder in being practically smokeless achieves its greatest end, but as a matter of fact its smokeless feature is incidental and was an accident. When the idea of modern long range guns was conceived it was at once apparent that the old black powder lacked explosive force, and thousands of experiments were made with various chemicals to procure a powder of high explosive properties, and this was at last accomplished. When the new powder was tried, much to the surprise of every one it was found that practically no smoke followed the explosion, though this could of course have been predicted had the question ever arisen. The volume of smoke from black powder is due mainly to the quantity of charcoal in the powder, an ingredient not found in the smokeless explosive. Smokeless powder, though a great boon to the sportsman, is of questionable value on the battlefield, so far as its smokelessness is concerned. The smoke clouds of old days were frequently most advantageously used to cloak movements of troops and batteries and really interfered with the enemy much more than with the troops creating the smoke.—Exchange.

Berthollet and Robespierre. It is said that the celebrated savant Berthollet in the most dangerous times of the republic sustained his fearless love of truth. Some days prior to the ninth Thermidor a sandy deposit was found in a barrel of brandy intended for the army. The contractors, suspected of poisoning, were immediately arrested, and the scaffold was already prepared. Berthollet, however, examined the brandy and reported it free from all adulteration. "You dare maintain," said Robespierre to him, "that that brandy does not contain poison?" As his reply Berthollet drank off a glass, saying, "I never drank so much before."

"You have plenty of courage!" exclaimed Robespierre. "I had more when I signed my report," replied the chemist, and here the matter terminated.

Fiddling and Skating. The celebrated violinist Joachim during a winter residence in northern Germany was in the habit of watching the skaters on a fine piece of water beneath his windows until one day it occurred to him to try the exercise himself. As he had never yet donned a pair of skates he put himself into the hands of a man who provided skates and instruction in the art on the brink of the water and was soon equipped and started on the ice, the master leading his pupil.

Flinding no difficulty in keeping his balance under these circumstances, Joachim felt sure he could go alone, desired his leader to leave him and the next minute was sprawling on the ice on his back. "Aha!" said the teacher triumphantly as he raised his prostrate pupil. "You see it is not quite so easy as playing a fiddle!"

To Reform Him. Minister—You say you are going to marry a man to reform him. That is noble. May I ask who it is? Miss Beauty—It's young Mr. Bondclipper. Minister—Indeed! I did not know he had any bad habits. Miss Beauty—Yes; his friends say that he is becoming quite miserly.

Anticipation. "Doesn't it make you the least bit envious to see what elegant furniture Mrs. Eresby is putting into her house next door?" "Not a bit. My husband says it will be sold by the sheriff within six months—and I'll be there to buy it."—Chicago Tribune.

CHOKED ON THEM. "That man seems just choking with anger." "I guess that is because he has just had to swallow his words."—Baltimore American.

SQUELCHED THE NEW ORATOR.

Grandiloquent Speech of New Member of Congress Neatly Ridiculed by "Sunset" Cox. A new member of congress from one of the rural districts of Michigan was ambitious to distinguish himself by his oratory, and accordingly watched for a favorable opportunity. At length an occasion presented itself. A motion was made in the house for enforcing the execution of some statute; whereupon the orator in embryo rose solemnly up, and after giving three loud hems, spoke as follows: "Mr. Speaker: Have we laws, or have we not laws? If we have laws, and they are not observed, to what end are those laws made?" So saying, he sat down, his chest heaving high with conscious consequence. Instantly Cox, the clown of the house, with a twinkle in his eye, rose and delivered his thoughts in these words: "Mr. Speaker: Did the honorable gentleman who spoke last speak to the purpose, or not speak to the purpose? If he did not speak to the purpose, to what purpose did he speak?" That particular orator never troubled the house again.

WOMEN MAKE GOOD SAILORS.

Women are employed as sailors in Norway, Denmark and Finland, and prove themselves to be expert mariners. When there is a woman on board even the smallest sailing ship, whether she be the wife of the skipper or the stewardess, she is expected to take her turn at the ordinary work of the sailor, even including the duties of the man at the wheel and the night watch. Denmark employs several women as state officials at sea. They go out to meet incoming ships, clamber up nimbly out of their boats, show their official diplomas and steer the newcomers safely into the harbor. Experienced captains admit that they make excellent sailors, and are equal to seamen in dexterity and powers of endurance. THOSE ROUND-TRIP TICKETS.

Little Girl's Conclusion That Seemed to Be Abundantly Justified by the Facts.

"I never think of the dreadful ocean without being reminded of the remark that a small child of mine made to me on the way out last summer," said a cheerful young matron who had just returned from abroad. "I was suffering from one of the most awful spells of seasickness. My little daughter for three days had been lying in my berth, while the stewardess from time to time tempted my reluctant appetite, I making dutiful efforts to swallow and retain something—anything to sustain life till I could get off that agitated monster called a 'floating palace.' 'Mamma,' queried this daughter of mine after she had just witnessed a particularly harrowing scene, 'do you think you'll ever go back home if you once get on shore again?' 'Oh, yes,' I groaned in reply; 'I don't believe I would, though, if I didn't have these round-trip tickets. Having them, I've simply got to return.' 'Round-trip tickets!' the child repeated, musingly; then after a moment: 'Mamma, I believe that's what must be the matter with your meals. They all seem to have round-trip tickets, too.'"
