A LESSON WELL LEARNED. In the columns of the Tagliche Rundschau there is an amusing story concerning Senator Elihu Root; what the German paper's authority for the story is does not appear, but if it is not true, we can only wish that it were! Mr. Root, when he was Secretary of State, engaged a new messenger boy, a little colored lad, who showed the greatest respect for every one about the office. Mr. Root asked him where the wastebasket was. "Mr. Riley has taken it," said the youth. "Mr. Riley?" said Mr. Root, surprised. "Who is he?" "Why this man here" answered the lad. "Oh, you mean Pete," said the Secretary, and he returned to his work. A little later he asked the boy who had left the window open. "Mr. Lantz did that," was the answer. "Mr. Lantz? Who under the sun is Mr. Lantz?" asked Mr. Root. "Why, the window washer." "Look here, my boy," said the Secretary, kindly, "don't call every one an idiot; call people by their first names. I can never tell whom you mean." In the course of an hour the lad thrust his head in the door of the Secretary's private office, and said, "Say, Elihu, there's a fat guy outside who wants to speak to you." The Secretary was taken by surprise at the unusual effect of his words, and sprang up. The "fat guy" was President Taft.

A GREAT ANTICIPATION. Mr. Lonnie Schiesler in the sunny south. Took a notion to make cabbage into sour kraut. When he went to buy the barrels, it took a lot of dough; He scratched his head, said, "I don't know. I've got some money, but not enough to buy a thousand barrels for the blooming stuff. Cabbage is a bringin' thirty dollar per ton. But Lonnie said, "That is not enough money. It ought to bring one hundred a ton." Thirty dollars is enough for a ton by gee!
