ST. ELMO WELL PRESENTED

Dramatization of Great Book Interested at Columbia Last Night.

The dramatization of Augusta Evans's "St. Elmo," presented at the Columbia Theatre last night by the George Amusement Company, proved an interesting drama. The popularity of the book and the strength of the play insured a good representation on the stage, and the characters last night did their different parts justice. Fred Eckhart, in the title role, and Gretchen Sherman, as Edna Earl, were the two characters most popularly received. The transformation of Willis Wood, a country boy, from his backwoods habits to his movements in good society was also interesting.
