

M. U. MAN DISLIKES HIS TITLE "PRINCE"

G. J. Salem of Egypt Can't See Why He Should Not Be "Mr."

TOOK DEGREE HERE

Says Agricultural Colleges of His Country are Improving.

Because a man was born in far-away Egypt and owns a large estate in that country, is no reason why the title of "prince" should follow him in his travels about the world. At least that is what Prince G. J. Salem, a native of Mehalla Kohra, Egypt, and a graduate of the College of Agriculture of the University of Missouri, says.

Mr. Salem is visiting in Columbia. He was agreeably surprised with the growth of the University since his graduation in 1905. Since graduating he has traveled in several foreign countries and has spent considerable time in Egypt settling up different matters in connection with his estate. "Prince" Salem, as he was known here in his undergraduate days, says the title was conferred upon him some time after attending the University.

"I would rather be a 'prince of good fellows,'" he said this morning, "than have a title because I happened to be born in a foreign country."

Mr. Salem says the agricultural schools of foreign countries are making rapid strides. France, he says, is taking the lead. On his return to his native land after several years absence he found that the universities of Egypt were beginning to study the methods of farming that are used in other countries. He believes the agricultural colleges of France and Germany are almost on an equal basis with the colleges of the United States.

Prince Salem intends to make his future home in Columbia as soon as his estate in Egypt is disposed of. In his travels about the world he has made a close study of agricultural methods. He attended the University of California after receiving his degree at Missouri.

"MORAL TRAINING IS PARENT'S TASK"

President J. W. Wood Says School Can't Supplant Home.

IDEAS, NOT IDEALS

Says Teacher's Duty Is Intellectual, Not Emotional.

"The school can give children ideas but it cannot give them ideals. The primary institution for moral training is the home," said President J. M. Wood of Stephens College at Assembly Tuesday. "The home has an influence on the child practically twenty-four hours of the day, while the school can influence the child only 3 per cent of his waking hours."

"The ideas a child receives in the school will have to be interpreted outside of the school, sometimes outside of the home or church. In dealing with children we have to deal with persons having different moral standards than ours. We cannot give them our ideals in the schoolroom, but we can attempt to lead the child to form good standards."

"The function of the school in moral training is not to give ideals, as ideals are emotional, and the work of a school must be intellectual. The school is not responsible for the morals of the world, as the home, church, state and one's vocation all tend to influence them."

LESS SMOKE FOR M. U.'S CAMPUS

Mechanical Stokers to Be Installed Will Eliminate the Soot.

A NEW STEEL STACK

Addition of Two More Boilers Requires Another Chimney.

"Smoke will no longer roll forth from the big smokestack just west of Academic Hall, to cloud the campus and sprinkle the clean clothes in numerous back yards with specks of black hydrocarbonate."

Along with other improvements the University of Missouri is to install a modern method of feeding its furnaces, which will destroy all carbon before the smoke leaves the furnaces.

This news should bring joy to the hearts of the housewives, and when the linen is removed from the clotheslines in the yards near the campus there will be general rejoicing.

A big steel smokestack is to divide honors with its brick brother. It will stand near the present stack, and will be just the height of the brick stack.

The reason for the building of the new smokestack is that the old brick stack is not large enough to care for the gases from the coal that will be burned when two new boilers have been built. Mechanical stokers will be used. The coal is carried into the furnace in a steady stream and the volatile gases that are given off when the coal comes in contact with the fire are blown against red-hot fire bricks. These red-hot bricks consume a large part of the hydro-carbon in the gases. Heretofore these gases were immediately carried out of the stack after the coal was burned.

KANSAS WAS TOO CONFIDENT

Jayhawkers Bought and Engraved Cup—Missouri Gets It.

Missouri has a cup in the trophy room of Rothwell Gymnasium which was bought and engraved for Kansas. Last winter Kansas unexpectedly won the indoor track meet from the Tigers by one point. This victory gave the Jayhawkers cause for believing they would win the outdoor meet, also.

It is customary in the Missouri-Kansas outdoor meet, for the losing team to put up $7.50 to purchase a cup for the victors. Kansas is fond of trophies, and feeling sure of winning the outdoor meet, she bought and engraved a large cup. She then waited for the meet, which was to have proven the Jayhawker superior to the Tiger.

The Tiger upset the dope, and won by a large margin. The cup which had been bought for Kansas and was to have been paid for by the Tigers, was won by the Tigers and paid for by the Jayhawkers.
