

UNIVERSITY IN "DAILY DRIFT"

A. L. Bixby Writes About Visit to Columbia Journalism Week.

A. L. Bixby, who spoke at the Commercial Club banquet here Journalism Week, writes about his trip to Columbia in his column, "Daily Drift," in the Nebraska State Journal:

"A jerk-water branch of the Wabash system ducks down from Centralia to the college city through a region made memorable in war time by bushwhacking warfare which resulted in the death of many splendid gentlemen representing both sides in the late unpleasantness. At Centralia, for instance, half a carload of unarmed federals, on their way north, were taken from the train and put to death without benefit of clergy. A few of the old men of this section who are white-headed, wear goatees and talk about the "wah" still retain a touch of the old spirit of hostility, proving that war is hell and that the flames of the same are not easily extinguished, and Billy Sunday says we ought to go down with cannon and sword and "clean up Mexico in the name of the Lord." How does that fool talk fit in with the doctrine of the Nazarine? Let's put on the armor of righteousness and the buckle of justice and clean up the United States of America. Won't that be the better way?"

The state press association is in session at Columbia and the little city bore a distinctly holiday appearance. I arrived at four in the afternoon, just in time to stand in front of the College of Journalism, so ably presided over by Walter Williams and his corps of helpers, and get into the group picture of distinguished Missouri editors.

In a subsequent automobile ride about the city I learned several important facts: One that the great state of Missouri is waking up to the needs and benefits of the state university and has several new science buildings under way and nearing completion. The state university was located at Columbia and the first building erected seventy-five years ago, but a long line of legislators with ample chin-whiskers and conservative ideas of the value of higher education have until the last few years opposed all schemes of university extension or expansion. All is changed, and the school is growing as it deserves. It is now equipped to do business. It has two groups of buildings, separated by only a few hundred feet. The first devoted to academic, the second and more modern to applied sciences, including agriculture, which is fortified and strengthened and made effective by having the necessary land for all experimental purposes. Eight hundred acres is the contribution of the state for university uses."

H. W. Prentiss Visiting Here.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Prentiss, Jr., of Pittsburg, Pa., are visiting here during stunt week. Mr. Prentiss is a graduate of the University and formerly was secretary to President R. H. Jesse.

MISS STANLEY PLANS STEP SAVING KITCHEN

Home Economics Instructor's House Built Primarily for Comfort.

A CLOTHES SHOOT

Soiled Linen Can Be Collected in Basement Laundry Without Walking.

Miss Luise Stanley of the home economics department of the University is having a home built on Rosemary lane which she planned herself. It is brick veneer and stucco with brown trimmings. There are three rooms and a hall on the first floor with the porch opening from the back of the living room. Upstairs there are five rooms, bath and sleeping porch. A clothes shoot runs from the upstairs hall down to the basement. The soiled linen may be dropped into it from either floor and thus save carrying down stairs. The woodwork in the hall, living room and dining room will be oak. The dining room will be paneled in oak half-way to the ceiling. The buffet will be built in the wall next to the kitchen. To the side of the buffet will be a china closet, very much like the buffet in appearance, that opens into the kitchen.

Kitchen, a Step-Saver.

The kitchen is small and designed to save steps. Between the clothes shoot and the china closet, which opens from the dining room, is the sink with a shelf on each side. The dishes may be brought to the kitchen door and placed on the shelf. They may be washed at the sink and either placed in the kitchen cupboard which is just next to the dining room.

At the end of the cupboard is a shelf which will hold the gas stove. This stove will be without legs and will rest on this shelf. To the right of the stove is another closet where provisions will be kept. The working space will be about seven feet by three feet. The kitchen opens out onto an enclosed porch. The ice box which stands near the door will be built in and arranged so that the ice may be put in from the outside.

The garbage bucket will stand in a part of the enclosed shelf under the gas stove. There will be an opening in the top of the shelf from the garbage to be dropped through and an opening through the wall on the porch so the bucket may be taken out without coming into the kitchen.

Laundry in Basement.

The basement will contain the laundry, furnace room and a finished room for the boy who takes care of the furnace. The room will be plastered and contains a closet and two windows. It may be entered from the outside. The woodwork upstairs will be white. There is a closet in each room and a linen closet in the hall. The upstairs living room will have a fire place in one end with book-cases built in at each side. A small dressing room which will contain furniture built in, opens from the living room. This room will be done entirely in white. The sleeping porch will open from the living room also. Each room will contain two electric lights arranged to suit the comfort of the occupant and not for ornament.

There is no front or back porch just an enclosed vestibule at the front and the back doors. The house will be about thirty feet by thirty-four feet and is built on a lot fifty feet by one hundred and thirty feet. The house will probably be finished the first of August. Miss Stanley expects to move in as soon as the upstairs is completed.

AUTHOR OF "OLD MISSOURI" HERE

Dr. George A. Wauchope in Columbia After Nineteen-Year Absence.

Dr. George A. Wauchope, the author of "Old Missouri," is in Columbia. He is back after an absence of nineteen years to meet old friends, colleagues and former students and to attend the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the University. He was a professor of English in the University. He now is head of the English department in the University of South Carolina.

Dr. Wauchope taught at the University four years. He left here in 1905 to be professor of English in the University of Iowa. Later he took a year's graduate course at Harvard. He became a professor in the University of South Carolina in 1898. For the last four years he has lectured at the summer course at the University of Virginia.

He was for several years on the regular staff of The Critic and the Baltimore Sun. He has written much, both in prose and verse, for magazines and newspapers. Doctor Wauchope also delivers many public lectures and commencement addresses.

DR. HUDSON TO GRADUATES

Columbia High Gives Diplomas to Fifty-Four Students.

"The Second Discovery of America" was the subject of the address to the senior class of the Columbia High School by Dr. J. W. Hudson at the commencement exercises in the Columbia Theater Friday night. Fifty-four students received diplomas.

Doctor Hudson pointed out that much had been said about the civilization of various countries dying out. No one knows what the contributions of Greece have meant to the world, he said. They, themselves, did not know at that time what they were giving to the world. It is only in the last few hundred years that the civilization of Greece has begun to be appreciated. The purpose of the Jewish nation was to give religion to the world, he said. But they did not realize how the religion of their narrow country would influence the entire universe. The purpose of Rome was to give to the world a code of laws—civil and international.

The business of education it seems, he said, is to place America's mission to the world so that it can not die out. A few things most important to the world, he said, were a new intellectualism, a new religion, a new idealism, a new justice. America, Dr. Hudson believes, has given to the world a new ideal. She has assumed not only the responsibility of her own nation but that of other nations as well. Her patriotism is world-wide. Americans are losing some of their individuality, because there is so much cooperation, things are being done in crowds.

Miss Mary Louise Reid Brown was the valedictorian and Cuthbert Stephenson salutatorian. Miss Aldeah Wise won the prize in book-keeping and Lloyd Latschaw the prize in the short hand department.

AS AN IOWA EDITOR SEES US

C. N. Marvin of Shenandoah Writes About Columbia Visit.

C. N. Marvin, editor of the Sentinel-Post, published at Shenandoah, Iowa, who was one of the speakers during Journalism Week says in his column and a half article regarding his trip:

Columbia was the first college in the United States to establish a department of journalism and it has grown and still easily retains its lead as the greatest school of its kind in the country. Once a year they take a week off from the regular work to entertain newspaper men and women of the whole country who are delighted to go there and talk shop, attend receptions and banquets galore and have a good time generally.

Columbia has the state university and two colleges for girls, Baptist and Christian. The University is co-ed, with 600 girls and 2100 boys. The girls who want to do something and who are not afraid to measure intellect and wit and work with the young men go to the University and I doubt whether you could find their superiors anywhere. Some of the brightest women workers of the country, come back to Columbia and talk over old times when they were students in the Varsity, and more of them will. The graduates of the School of Journalism are picked up by the newspaper publishers of the country and given good positions and they almost invariably make good.
