

LIKED THE STUDENTS' WORK

St. Louis Republic Comments on Visit of Journalism Seniors.

The St. Louis Republic of today, under the title of "A Welcome Invasion," thus comments editorially on the visit of a party of journalism seniors to the Republic office Friday night:

"In other days it was a fashion of journalism to record the visits of interesting strangers to editors' offices with many stately compliments and expressions of personal esteem. It is not the fashion to do so now, but the custom is worthy of revival when a party of seniors from a school of journalism comes to see a newspaper in the making and to try their 'prentice hands at helping to make one. The Republic has received such a visit from nine seniors of the Missouri School of Journalism and was glad to give them a little taste of real work and glad to give its space to the product of that work. Had their writing been scattered through columns of the paper instead of gathered in one place it is a safe guess that Republic readers would not have noticed the difference between it and that of more experienced workers. They have learned what is elementary in their craft and are about to acquire the further instruction that comes only from the repetition and variety of daily practice. It is safe to promise them many a monotonous day's work, a world of trival, irksome things to do, a day of zealous accomplishment now and then, a living and a little more and an opportunity for useful service which is wide enough to engage the best there is in any man who is fitted for the work, however great his endowment of mind and character may be."

NEW BULLETIN BY J. B. POWELL

"Newspaper Efficiency in the Small Town" Is Title.

"Newspaper Efficiency in the Small Town" is the title of a new Journalism bulletin, a discussion of the problems that confront the proprietors and editors of small-town newspapers, by J. B. Powell, instructor in advertising in the School of Journalism. It will be ready for circulation in a few days.

The bulletin maintains that to be respected and of influence, the small-town paper must be a paying business, managed with a corresponding degree of efficiency and business methods. Book-keeping and the most simple cost system Mr. Powell believes serviceable are discussed.

The equipment and arrangement of the small-town plant is considered with reference to efficiency and some of the varied duties and opportunities of the editor are pointed out. Mr. Powell contends that the small-town editor should know enough about his advertiser's business to enable him to write the advertisements and plan the advertiser's sales, is necessary, so that results may be attained beneficial to both advertiser and publisher.

FOUNDERS DAY NOT CELEBRATED

April 19, However, Is Remembered as Birthday of Major Rollins.

How many persons in Columbia know that today is Founders Day at the University of Missouri? And how many of them know what Founders day is? It is the birthday of Major James S. Rollins, "Father of the University of Missouri." He was born at Richmond, Ky., April 19, 1812.

Major Rollins was at the head of the movement in 1839 for a school of higher education in Missouri. In July, 1839, a campaign for subscriptions was begun. The campaign closed in October. In that time, $118,000 dollars was subscribed, and all but $100 paid in. July 4, 1840, the ceremonies opening the University of Missouri were held.

There is no celebration at the University today, and there has been none on Founders day for years.

Assembly Lecture Tomorrow Night by Prof. A. T. Olmstead.

Prof. A. T. Olmstead in his lecture on "Turkey, the War Prize," in the University Auditorium at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening, will show that the past history of Turkey explains with remarkable clearness present-day conditions which otherwise seem difficult to understand. An attempt will be made to appreciate the position of Turkey as a power and of the Turks as a nation.

"I shall try to point out," said Professor Olmstead, "the fact that Turkey has not been given full justice by Western writers. I shall try to indicate the strength and the weakness of the Turkish people."

Professor Olmstead has spent three years in Turkey and is intimately acquainted with the different racial elements there.

THEY WANT A MODERN SCHOOL

Farmers Near Atlanta, Mo., See Need of Better Educational Facilities.

A rural school with an auditorium and a gymnasium in addition to the classrooms and laboratories is what a group of farmers near Atlanta, Mo., want for their children.

Six or eight families have been supporting the Union School five miles from Atlanta. There are only eleven pupils enrolled but they have a capable instructor and two years of high school work is given. Mr. Slocum, who has charge of the school, goes to and from his work in an automobile and incidentally takes the children rides over the country. Pupils and teacher seem to be in perfect harmony, and the progress of the school is their first interest.

The school is small but attractive, having tables and chairs rather than the ordinary desks. A large bookcase contains the school library. The walls are decorated with pictures and maps. Realizing the profit in better educational facilities as shown by the success of this little school, the farmers are trying to extend its influence and have a building that will accommodate all the children in the entire community. They want a school that will offer a four-year high school course and provide a place for community entertainments of various kinds. The auditorium of such a building could also be used for church services.

On Monday and Tuesday of this week the farmers of the Union School district had meetings to boost the community house proposition. M. F. Miller, professor of soils in the College of Agriculture, and J. Kelly Wright of the State Board of Agriculture, were among those on the program.
