CHICKENS MUST HAVE SHADE

Advice From Prof. H. L. Kempster of the Poultry Department. "Poultry cannot thrive in summer unless it is provided with cool, shady places," says H. L. Kempster, of the Poultry Department of the Missouri College of Agriculture. "The young stock will not make economical growth, and there will be a larger number of deaths among them if their quarters are not shaded. With mature stock the egg production will be cut down quite largely because of excessive heat.

Ducks are especially susceptible to the direct rays of the hot sun, according to Mr. Kempster, and one should never attempt to raise them unless they have shade. Poultry houses set on blocks so that the chicks can go underneath, orchards, patches of corn, etc., are measures which can be easily employed. Farmers will find that a corn field will make one of the most satisfactory places for raising the young as soon as they do not require the close attention necessary during their early life.

NOT TOO LATE TO PLANT CORN

Professor Advises Farmers to Retrieve Loss Caused by Floods.

Despite the fact that the recent heavy rains and high water have flooded much corn land, there is still time for Missouri farmers to grow a crop, according to L. F. Childers, assistant professor of agronomy at the University of Missouri.

"It is not too late to plant corn, if the right varieties are used," said Mr. Childers. "Reid's Yellow Dent and Iowa Silver Mine will mature in from 115 to 120 days. If fields can be replanted by June 15 or 20 these varieties will fit the season."

Mr. Childers says that the average date for the first killing frost in North Missouri is October 10 to 15, and in South Missouri from October 15 to 28. He says it would be a serious mistake to plant either a late maturing corn or an extremely early one when there is but four months in which the corn can grow.

"Ninety-day corn will on the average yield 30 per cent less than Reid's Yellow Dent or Iowa Silver Mine, so it would not be advisable to plant that until after June 20 or later," said Mr. Childers.

"When planting corn under the present conditions it would be a mistake to put it in deeper than one and one-half inches. It is best for the disc to precede the planter, but corn can be planted without previously discing. In this case the planter should be followed with either a disc or small-shoveled cultivator to stir the surface and keep it from checking. This cultivation will be necessary because of the many weed seeds brought to the land by the overflow.
