HONK! HONK! HONK! HONK!
Johnny is becoming advanced. He no longer attends school primarily to learn reading, writing and arithmetic, with a little geography and history thrown in. His teachers are instructing him about cleaning his teeth, in order that he may avoid disease; what to do in emergencies, in order to save life; what foods are good for the body and which are not, in order that he may avoid illness. "Safety First" has become the motto of the schoolroom.

While the motto is still popular, Columbia Johnnies might be profitably instructed in the meaning of honks. Johnny is interested in honks. If you don't believe it, give him a chance at the honking apparatus. Johnny would feel more of a man if he knew more about honks, especially if he could instruct his elders somewhat. Also, Johnny will some day grow up, after the manner of him the world over, and he will view the honk from the standpoint of honker and not honk-ee.

With all this in mind, let Columbia Johns and their Brother Bills and Sister Sues be told that the motor signals in Columbia are these: One honk indicates straight ahead; two, a turning to the right; three, a turning to the left.

Such instruction will profit the children only as the drivers of the cars also learn the signals and use them. Scarcely a person in Columbia has missed the experience of standing at a street corner and wondering just which way two or three cars intended to travel. Many drivers signal with the hand, which is entirely satisfactory if the pedestrian can see the signal. This is not always the case. Neither is it always possible for drivers of other vehicles to determine the route of the vehicle following.

The poor motorist, already overburdened with statutes and ordinances, may object to any further rules as destroying the advantages of motoring. But to follow a definite system of signalling, already laid down by city ordinance, is at the least a time and temper saving measure for the benefit of both pedestrian and driver.

FOR ACTUAL GOOD
The Y.M.C.A. is not a charity organization, and in its campaign for members it will not solicit your support on such a ground. It is, rather, a vital factor in the life of the University.

Open twelve months a year, it is the one hospitable place during August for those who come to arrange to enter school. It found boarding and rooming places for about 215 persons this fall. It has found permanent jobs for 65 men who came to Columbia with less than $100 to carry them through the school year. It has already given the rest of the 157 applicants for employment 261 odd jobs and will continue to supply them with work during the year. It is the information bureau and first friend to all those who come to the University from foreign countries and distant states.

So, by taking out a membership in the association, you are but enabling it to reach farther the helping hand of friendship. Is it worth while?

Y. M. C. A. HAD 210 AT NOON

Membership Campaign Began With A Dinner Last Night

The total membership of the Y. M. C. A. to noon today as reported at the noonday luncheon was 210 members. Reports of the ten various teams was read by Association Recorder, E. R. Gordon, and placed on a blackboard in the banquet hall of the Virginia Grill. The report will be brought up to date each noon. "It's like the world series reports and nearly as exciting," said Captains and Henry as No. 8.

Letters from Dean Kirkslager and Chester R. Longwell, now at Yale, both graduates of last year, wishing the membership committee success were read by J. H. Smith, chairman of the membership committee.

Prof. W. J. Shepard, professor of political science, spoke at the noonday luncheon.

The membership campaign officially opened last night at the Virginia Grill when 85 members of the committee attended the dinner given in their behalf. Guy V. Aldrich, Association Secretary at the University of Iowa, who has been engaged in student association work for several years, delivered the address of the evening.

"We do not have to go out with an apology on our lips in presenting the interests of the Y. M. C. A. nor need any apology be made about the activities of the Association," said Mr. Aldrich.

Tracing the development of the Y. M. C. A. movement from the time it originated in London in the mind of a department store clerk, Sir George Williams, Mr. Aldrich gave a brief history of the rapid growth and extension of the "Y" idea. There are associations in practically every University, College and Academy of any size or importance in the United States, according to the Iowa secretary.

MONTE CREWS TO VISIT HERE

New York Illustrator Will Be In Columbia Thanksgiving.

A letter received here from Monte Crews, New York Illustrator and a former student in the University, says that he will visit here Thanksgiving. He is now working on a set of illustrations for a story which will appear shortly in Scribner's Magazine.

A poster drawn by Mr. Crews for the Howard County Home-coming attracted much favorable comment this summer. The poster was widely circulated throughout the state. It represented a Howard County pioneer, clad in coon skin cap, leather trousers and fringed coat, standing before a "prairie schooner." The original poster was presented to the state historical society.

Feels Like An Old Grad Already.

C. H. White of Seymour, Mo., who was graduated from the University in 1914, writes to Columbia friends: "Two years away from old M. U. sometimes makes me feel like I am getting to be one of the 'Old Grads,' of whom I heard so much while there. Still I enjoy the reading of news of the University just as much now as I did when I was a student there. At times my athletic zeal has been so great that it was all I could do to keep back a yell for the Tigers."

"Cum Laude" Sweaters

Funny how ubiquitous a sweater is. From matriculation to graduation its uses are multitudinous, its paths devious. And how nomadic, too. The athlete's luxurious shaker, proudly alphabetized, migrates from "stude" to co-ed, from frat house to girl's dorm. If it's a Bradley, it abides there
