CHURCH SUFFRAGE IS DISCUSSED
Questions of Negro Vote Laid Over at Episcopal Conference.

By United Press.
ST. LOUIS, Oct. 16.—Whether negro clergymen and laymen shall have a voice in the conference of the Protestant Episcopal Church of America was laid over by the house of deputies today when that body was called to order. The question of negro votes was the first order of business on today's calendar.

The important report of the joint commission on business methods in the church will come up some time this week; it may be heard today. The report is expected to arraign the lack of business methods in the handling of church funds.

Club Winners to Visit Farmers' Week.

George W. Reavis returned Sunday from Aurora, where he had charge of the agricultural exhibit at the fair last week. Mr. Reavis also conducted the contests in the boys' and girls' club work. In a patching and button-hole contest ninety-six girls were enrolled, and in the grain-judging and stock-judging contests, twenty boys competed. The fair gave $50 in prizes. The winners will represent Lawrence County here during Farmers' Week.

Dr. Loeb to Bankers' Meetings.

Dr. Isidor Loeb left today for St. Louis, where he will attend the first group meeting of the Missouri Bankers' Association. He is to deliver a series of lectures on taxation before the association at their meetings in St. Louis, Hannibal, Chillicothe and St. Joseph this week.

THE SIDE LINE REGULAR A FOOTBALL CHARACTER

It was a crisp fall afternoon as the Old-Timer and his Friend strolled into Rollins Field to watch the Tigers in an early season practice.

The Old-Timer hadn't missed that a scrimmage in the years he had lived in Columbia. He had seen green teams develop into champions and had witnessed Tigers who started the season well end the fall schedule in disastrous defeat. So he watched the scrimmage with a critical eye. Not so the Friend. He had a friend on the Tiger team whose movements throughout the scrimmage he followed admiringly. The other players didn't interest him.

But the Old-Timer was not allowed to dream long of the old days.

"Just look at that boy go through that hole," exclaimed the Friend. "Stan is sure there all over. You ought to have seen him play on the high school team. One time he—"

"I understand," replied the Old-Timer. "But he's got nothing on Mc-Williams. Now back in 1909," but he was interrupted by the arrival of a husky person in an M sweater. He was the Wise-One, who knew more about the game than "Indian" Schulte himself.

"Now I've been in this little old game some myself and you can't tell me that this guy Stankowski isn't a little whang," said he. "Maybe he's light, but note that speed, and you take it from me that the backs this year are going to bust through anything you can put in front of 'em."

At this moment a feminine voice broke in. "Oh, dear there's Rodg out there getting hurt again. His face is scratched up now something terrible. I do hope it won't leave scars, and he looks so perfectly brave in his leather hat and football trousers."

She had arrived—the co-ed and her companion, the Boob. The Co-ed liked to watch the scrimmage because it gave her hysterics, and the Boob trailed along because he had nothing else to occupy his mind.

"Well," said the Boob, "if Rodg wants to get his face scratched it's none of my business. Nobody forced him to do it. As for me, I can't see myself letting my life's blood run out through my nose just to amuse the howling populace. Such a game may be all right for this coarse person in the M sweater, but dancing is so much more fun."

But the remark was wasted on the "coarse person," who was at that moment engaged in an argument with the Old-Timer over the comparative merits of "Indian" Schulte and "Bill" Roper. The Boob watched the antics of a small boy who was rubbing cinders into the hair of a smaller one for the amusement of the bystanders and finally left the bleachers in disgust, guiding the Co-ed solicitously by the arm.

And so it is each year. The same types of students are always found on the bleachers during Tiger practice. Some may be authorities on the game; enjoy the contest for its own sake; while still others are directly antagonistic to the sport. But at the opening of the season they are always found in their haunt in Rollins Field, drawn there by the irresistible attraction of the game.
