

MEN OF THE UNIVERSITY WHO ARE SERVING NATION

The University of Missouri takes high rank among American schools in war-time service to the Nation.

It was a Missouri man who carried the draft law into execution. Adjutant General Crowder holds an LL.B. degree, class of '86, from Missouri. He was born in Missouri, was graduated from West Point, served in the army in Texas, was commandant at the University, took his degree here, was transferred to the judge advocate general's staff and in 1911 was made judge advocate general, the highest legal position in the United States Army.

Troubled times in Russia brought another man into world notice, David R. Francis, holder of the honorary degree of LL.D. from Missouri University and a member of the Board of Curators. Today he is ambassador to Russia in that nation's hour of trial.

Food conservation demanded the services of the dean of the College of Agriculture, F. B. Mumford, now food administrator of Missouri. The problem of a soldier's library at Camp Funston was solved by H. O. Severance, University librarian.

In the early spring the University excused more than 600 students to go to the farms and raise war crops and engage in other forms of national service. Credit was given for this work. Nearly 100 men left for the training camps and not one failed to get a commission who had had military training at the University.

The need for ambulance drivers in France was heard. Money was raised—some of the men paying their own expenses—and twenty-five men of the Missouri Ambulance Unit left for France early in the summer. One of the members of this unit was William Gardner, son of Governor Gardner.

From the faculty of the University have gone thirty-four men. Dean Walter Miller of the Graduate School is in charge of the Missouri Bureau of the American Union in France. Dr. M. P. Ravenel is now a major in the Medical Corps at Fort Riley. The English department lost four men and the College of Agriculture, five.

Of the twenty-six men enrolled in the School of Commerce last year, eight are in service; of the 110 in the School of Journalism last semester, twenty have gone. The senior class of the College of Agriculture, of nearly 100, has given 17.6 per cent for service.

There are no complete figures of Missouri men now in the war. The College of Agriculture is able to give the nearest complete figures. It knows that of its graduates or former students, 35 are officers, 6 are in France, 125 have been called and accepted and 75 have volunteered—a total of 241. This cannot include all, for there are doubtless many in the army about whom the college knows nothing. Every day brings reports of old men now in service.

The number of Missouri men in France is not known. Two old Missouri men have gone over the top—real fighting men. One of them is Jack Murray, once a student in the School of Journalism and now attached to the Canadian forces in France. On the Italian front, Rudolph Petrucci, a graduate of '15, fought in the trenches for twenty months and is now in a hospital, recovering from a wound in his left leg. Robert Semple, attached to the Medical Corps of the Twelfth Engineers, is in France and wounded. J. K. Saunders and Vernon Nash have both driven ambulances in France. Nash is now doing relief work in India. Three Missouri men were chosen to go from the training camps to France with the expeditionary forces and are now in France. Four Missouri men are in the Tenth Engineers in France.

Irvin Shaw is one of the first aviators to be sent to France. Dr. Walter E. Muns, once of the faculty of the School of Medicine, and his wife are in France, attached to the Syracuse University Unit. J. H. Patrick and Walt Mandry are in the medical department in France. Dr. J. E. Stowers is a captain in the French army, and William P. Jesse is a lieutenant in the American army in France. G. T. Bloomer is driving an ambulance with the Harvard Unit, and Captain W. W. Burden and Captain Fred T. Kennedy are with the American army in France.

Marcus Bell and Albert Cowan are in France. H. Clay Stark and Joe Travis are with the American Field Service in France. C. W. Sturtevant is lieutenant-colonel with the United States Engineers in France. S. M. Skinner is with the Twelfth Regiment of Engineers, and Dr. C. D. Pickrell is a lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps in France.

L. P. Gay is driving an ambulance and Frank Carr, J. H. Spence, W. E. Smith, John Nowell, W. Brown, Lee Heidbrader and G. W. Freiberger are with various units either in France or on their way.

As time goes on, the list of men in active service will grow. Missouri has men in every branch of service. They are in the Navy, in the Marines, in the National Guard, in the Regular Army, in the Aviation Corps, in the Medical Corps and in the Y. M. C. A. war work. One thousand would be a conservative estimate of Missouri University men now in service for Uncle Sam.

MISS PETTIT SPEAKS AT TARKIO

Emergency Home Demonstration Agents Are Popular in State.

Miss Sarah Pettit, state emergency home demonstration agent, attended a women's meeting Saturday at Tarkio to assist in the final organization of Atchison County for a county home demonstration agent. Friday she spoke to a women's meeting at Palmyra.

Atchison is the second county to avail itself of the Government's offer to pay the salary of a woman home demonstration agent for the county, provided the county defrays her expenses. Dunklin County placed Miss Bertha Adams in office last Saturday. She was formerly district agent in home demonstration work, with headquarters at Rolla.

At present the state is divided into sixteen districts, according to area and railroad facilities. Each district has an agent, whose salary is paid by the Government. Her work with the women is analogous to the service of the county agricultural agents to the farmers.

ORCHARDISTS THANK TALBERT

Entomology Department Tells How to Increase Apple Yield.

Seventy-five orchardists from all parts of the state have written letters of appreciation to T. J. Talbert, who was an extension agent last year for the department of entomology. The extension service has been showing farmers how to spray and take care of their trees on the provision that they keep records of the increase in the apple yield.

After deducting for the cost of spraying materials, labor of spraying and other expenses involved in the new way of handling their trees, the farmers were all able to show a substantial profit. Some report that they made more money on their apples than on other crops which took up as much ground.
