KAISER IN HOLLAND; GERMAN NOBLES QUIT

E. L. KEENE
 (United Press Staff Correspondent)
 LONDON, Nov. 11.—Germany today is kaiserless and kingless. All reports tended to show that in addition to the emperor all the crown princes, kings, grand dukes and other royalty of the empire had renounced "their divine right" to rule over a people who already had abrogated that right by revolution.
 William Hohenzellern, the former kaiser, with his wife and son, the former crown prince, are believed to be at Dessteg, near Utrecht, Holland.
 LONDON, Nov. 11.—It is rumored at Eysden, Holland, that the crown prince has been held at the border by guards, according to a Central News dispatch from Eysden.

GIRLS, SOLDIERS AND FLAGS SWIRL ALONG IN VICTORY PARADE

Girls and flags made up 95 per cent of the parade that swirled through the streets of Columbia this afternoon in celebration of Germany's surrender.
 Perhaps the men, autos and guns made up more than 5 per cent, but it didn't seem that way to onlookers.
 Girls rode in autos, girls rode in motor trucks, and girls marched with the S. A. T. C. men. One soldier had a girl on each arm.
 Big American flags, little American flags and medium-sized American flags waved over shoulders and from autos.
 A few French flags appeared. An auto bore a banner made up of the flags of all the Allies.

Proclamations printed in red ink called on all stores to close in the names of the mayor. People jammed the sidewalks and streets along the route of the parade.
 The parade, headed by Mayor J. E. Boggs, Dean J. C. Jones, acting president of the University, Major C. M. Gordon, and Captain Dr. Guy L. Noyes, in a car driven by C. B. Bowling, left the University campus at 2 o'clock. A mounted marshal, bearing the flags of the Allies, came next, followed by the band.
 A Red Cross ambulance, followed by a Red Cross stretcher, came next. Other features of the parade were Red Cross nurses, the Home Guards, and R. O. T. C. men.

The parade marched down Eighth street, up Broadway on the right past Stephens College, and down Broadway on the left to Tenth street, out past Christian College, and back on Ninth street.
 Then it was supposed to disband, but many of the cars kept circling the city long afterward.
 When Dean J. C. Jones, acting president of the Missourian today that the armistice had been signed, he declared a holiday for the entire University, beginning at 11 o'clock.
 Mayor J. E. Boggs declared a holiday for the afternoon for the city.

"Where's the cannon?" asked people on Broadway as reports rang out to the north. But it was only a shotgun fired methodically by an old man in front of the Athens Hotel.
 One car bore the name of the City Emergency Hospital, and was filled with nurses.
 Business houses sent out their motor trucks, which were quickly loaded with girls. Soldiers, too, climbed aboard until loads were far beyond capacity. On an upgrade those at the rear would jump off and push.
 Red, white and blue paper hats of all styles were popular.
 S. A. T. C. men and the girls, who marched with them couldn't stop when the parade disbanded. They returned to Broadway to join the crowd milling up and down that street.
 A solemn-faced negro rode a donkey and bore a huge flag over his shoulder.

"It's a Fourth of July in November," was the remark of an old soldier of the fifties, as he viewed the parade this afternoon on Broadway. And that

 Pending further instructions no more inductions will be made into the Army nor entrainment promoted under these calls, according to an official announcement today.
