FRANCE KEPT WORLD'S SPIRIT

Doctor Watson Tells of Meaning of the French Stand.

Having served as rector of the American Church in Paris for seven years, including the war period, has made Dr. S. N. Watson fully conversant with the subject of his address, "France and Her Meaning," given in the University Auditorium last night at the first University Assembly of the school year.

He pointed out that France could have had her price but she would not betray the "spiritual treasure of the world," which was in her keeping. To this same unity of national conscience, exemplified in the stand of France, Doctor Watson said, we owed much of our own national re-birth.

Doctor Watson read at length from unpublished speeches of President Raymond Poincare during the war to prove that President Poincare was one of the greatest living Frenchmen and that he was the incarnation of the true spirit of France.

"The inherent love of the beautiful," said Doctor Watson, "is the basis of their spirit of independence." He explained that the French ideal of the beautiful implied freedom of impulse and action. Therefore France could not yield to material Prussia.

Doctor Watson's address was full of illuminating and informative stories drawn from his intimate associations with high government officials and scholars of France. President Poincare felt that France was not understood in America and asked Doctor Watson to present her case to the people of this country.

SEES QUEEN ELIZABETH

Former M. U. Girl Showed Her Through Hospital.

Miss Benta Whitaker, a student in the University from 1913 to 1915, now superintendent of nurses in Barnes Hospital of Washington University, St. Louis, escorted Queen Elizabeth of Belgium through the hospital when the king and queen were in St. Louis last week. In a letter to her mother, Mrs. B. Whitaker, 403 Christian College avenue, Miss Whitaker described the queen:

"She is very tiny; not pretty, but the daintiest of dainty persons, and dresses in such good taste. Her costume was gold and brown. She has light brown hair and very light blue eyes. She was most gracious, but kept asking questions we couldn't understand."

Miss Whitaker was a member of the receiving group for the queen.

STOCK JUDGES ORGANIZE

35 Members of Block and Bridle Club Draw Up Constitution.

Thirty-five members of the Block and Bridle Club met last night and drew up a constitution which will be sent out to the other four schools which recently competed in the live stock judging contest at Des Moines. The idea is for each one of these schools to draw up a constitution for a national Block and Bridle Club and pass it around to the others. The schools will then either select the one that is best of form a compromise constitution.

The Block and Bridle Club is an organization of all students in the College of Agriculture who are interested in animal husbandry. There is no set number to the members of the club now. Last night it was discussed whether or not Short Course men and vocational men should be allowed to belong. John U. Morris is president of the club.
