30 MEN ENLIST SINCE APRIL

University Town Is Not Fruitful Field for Recruiting.

A college town that has practically no other big enterprises is a poor town in which to obtain enlistments for the United States army, according to recruiting officials at the local recruiting station.

Where the young men of a community are students, preparing themselves for a professional or business career, there is not the incentive for army enlistments that there is in a community where the young men are employed in manufacturing or other pursuits and can often better their position by entering the service.

In spite of this fact the Columbia station has had an average of from four to five enlistments per month. Thirty men have been received since April 28, 1919 when the local office first opened.

Seven men, most of whom are residents of Columbia, enlisted to be sent to the detachment that has charge of the training and equipment at the University.

THE CUB GETS A "SCOOP"

City Clerk Pulls a Bright One on the Green Reporter.

The city hall employes are pretty foxy these days. Yesterday afternoon a Missourian reporter—a green looking cub—walked into the headquarters of the "trim or be trimmed" officer and asked for news.

"Well," said John S. Bicknell, city clerk, "I suppose you have the item about the mayor falling."

"No," said the reporter, getting out his pencil and a sheet of the yellow paper that reporters always carry. "Did the mayor fall?"

"Yes, he fell last night," said Mr. Bicknell.

"Well," said the reporter, who was beginning to see glimpses of a scoop for his paper. "Have you heard how he is today?"

"He ought to be all right today for he only fell asleep," concluded Mr. Bicknell.

Amid peals of laughter from the other employes, the reporter concluded that he had been "trimmed" and made his escape.
