

WILL ALASKA MILLS SOLVE PAPER LACK?

Newsprint Shortage May Be Overcome by National Forests of Northern Territory.

DEVELOPING RESOURCES

Chief Forester Greeley Opposes Local Commission as Being Unwise and Inefficient.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—That the shortage of newsprint will be overcome by new paper mills in Alaska is predicted by Col. W. B. Greeley, chief of the forest service, who has just returned from a month's inspection of timber and water power on the Tongass National Forest. "The national forests of Alaska," said Colonel Greeley, "contain resources sufficient to produce 1,500,000 tons of paper annually in perpetuity, and a paper industry in the Territory is now assured." Colonel Greeley believes that the administration of Alaska's great resources should be put in the hands of men on the ground, but is opposed to the transfer of all federal interest to a local commission.

A sale of 100,000,000 feet of pulp timber has been made, and a second sale of 1,500,000,000 feet, which will supply a large paper plant for 30 years, is now being arranged. "The national forests of Alaska," said Colonel Greeley, "offer paper manufacturers an ample supply of pulp timber, available under long term contracts at low prices and subject to very simple and reasonable cutting requirements. The forest service is doing its utmost to develop this resource of the territory. We will not only make Alaska one of the great sources of paper for the United States; but we will make the industry permanent, as it is in Norway, by keeping the cut of timber within what our forests are growing. Paper manufacturers who go to Alaska can count upon an assured supply of raw material indefinitely."

The chief forester points out also that national forest timber has supplied all the sawmills on the coast of Alaska for the past 15 years, furnished large quantities of lumber and mine timbers for local use, salmon cases by the hundred thousand, and high grade spruce for shipment to the eastern states. "Such facts," he said, "show that the national forests in Alaska are not locked up or shackled with burdensome restrictions as has been frequently alleged."

The development of Alaska, in the chief forester's opinion, has not been held back by overconservation as many claim, but mainly by business conditions which have prevented capital from exploiting her resources.

"Alaska," said Colonel Greeley, "cannot be made prosperous overnight by passing some new law. It is going to condition in the world's market. At conditions in the world's markets. At the same time, federal administration can undoubtedly be improved and we owe it to Alaska to aid her development in every practicable way. The first step in my judgment should be to decentralize the handling of federal matters by putting a representative of each department or bureau in the Territory with full authority to transact its business on the ground. Ninety per cent of the work of the Forest Service in Alaska is dispatched by our resident supervisors and only matters of the greatest importance come to Washington. This sort of organization is the cure for long range administration and red tape. These responsible federal officers might well form an Alaskan cabinet, acting as a unit in working out the best means for developing her resources. Furthermore, the territory should be given more self-government in local matters and should be aided by liberal federal appropriations to develop transportation."

"I seriously question," said the chief forester, "the proposal that a local commission in Alaska take over the administration of all federal laws and public resources. After all, the national interests in Alaska are uppermost. Her vast forests should meet acute needs arising from the depletion of our timber. These resources should, I believe, be handled in Alaska by the same experienced agencies and under the same uniform national policies as the States themselves, or would it seem wise to cut Alaska off from the energies and technical skill of great federal departments which are experts in doing the very things she needs to have done."

RIFLE CHAMPION IS HONORED BY GOLD BRAIDS
WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Gold braided admirals and generals with war decorations gave the individual rifle champion of the world, Sergeant Morris Fisher of the United States Marines, "gangway" and admiration when he arrived here from Antwerp, Belgium, last week.

Using the United States magazine rifle, Fisher won the 300-meter free rifle match at the Olympic shoot last month against ninety competitors representing thirteen different nations. His score of 996 out of a possible 1080 was 7 points over that of his nearest rival, Larsen, of Denmark. In this event the use of any type or pattern of rifle is permissible, with no restrictions as to telescopic sights, special barrels and other accessories which make for accuracy. Fisher's performance marks the first time this match has ever been won with the standard military rifle of any country, and also the first time the match has been won by a member of an American team.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE

30 BOYS IN C. H. S.
Thirty boys went out for the first football practice of the year of the Columbia High School Wednesday. Enthusiasm was shown by the boys turning out for practice yesterday, according to J. J. Shy, football coach.

"We have many letter men back with us," said Mr. Shy, "and many others, who, although not letter men, show surprising football ability. We are going to have a banner year. We are trying to arrange a series of football games. Many will be played out of town with Bonville, Moberly and other neighboring towns."

MORE ACTIVITY TICKETS WILL BE ISSUED

The supply of 2400 activity tickets issued by the athletic department of the University for the football season has been exhausted. The department has ordered 1000 more tickets and these will be offered for sale just as soon as the printer can deliver them. If the additional 1000 tickets are not enough to meet the demand still more will be printed until every person who desires to buy a ticket is accommodated. Everyone will be given an opportunity to buy one. The price of the activity tickets for the football season is $4.

ROUTINE PRACTICE ON ROLLINS FIELD

The varsity went through the regular routine practice yesterday afternoon. Dummy scrimmage, line work and tackling took up most of the time. The freshmen line has been used for the last two days to give the varsity practice in avoiding tackles in open field running.

The entire squad met at 7:15 o'clock last night in the gymnasium for "skull" practice. Signals were rehearsed, old plays reviewed and new ones talked over.

FRESHMAN SQUAD REDUCED TWICE

Although the freshmen are handicapped by a lack of equipment they are fast rounding into shape under the tutelage of William ("Bill") Collins and Captain James A. Kelly. The squad has been cut twice and promises to lose a few more at tomorrow's practice.

The men who are making good and who will be used in the first scrimmage against the varsity are: Porter at quarter; Stewart and Terry, ends; Ross and Smith, guards; Storms and Masters, tackles; Wagner and Wetzel look good in the backfield.

PHI GAMMA BEAT PHI PSIS 7-4

In an extra inning game yesterday afternoon the Phi Gamma Deltas beat the Phi Kappa Psis by a score of 6 to 5. The game was scheduled for seven innings. In the sixth the Phi Pairs tied the score and took a one run lead in the first half of the eighth. A batting rally by the Phi Gammas in the last half netted them two runs and won the game.

Batteries: For Phi Gamma Delta, Wacker and Whitbread; for Phi Psi, Maddox and Plattenburg.

Umpires: Nathan and Jasquin.
