STUDENTS MAY LOSE VOTES

Vocational Training Men Who Live Out of the State are Disqualified.

About 120 vocational students in the University will be disqualified from voting in the November 2 elections, according to registration officials at the University. Most of these students are not from Missouri, and nearly all of them have been here less than a year. Since one must be living at least one year in the state before he can vote, these students are barred from voting as Missourians.

Neither can they vote for their own state. For being in Missouri they can only vote as Missourians. There is no provision here whereby they could send their votes to their own state.

Some of the students have expressed the opinion that since they are here under government supervision, being also sent here by the government, they should be given the opportunity to vote their own state ticket just as the soldiers in the training camps were permitted to vote during the war.

Should this opportunity be refused, thousands of vocational students in the country, most of whom in training in other than their own states, will be practically disfranchised. Many of these are still soldiers, having been sent to a training school direct from the hospital before they got their discharge.

So far no action has been taken here and the students are at a loss to know whether any action will be taken at all. Election is only two weeks off. And any action by officials here must be taken at once in order to take effect in time.

JUDGE C. J. HENRY SPOKE HERE Supports Democratic Ticket—Mrs. Breckenridge at Sturgeon.

Judge C. J. Henry of Butler in his speech at the courthouse Saturday afternoon said that sentiment in Missouri was drifting away from the Republican party. He warmly endorsed Breckenridge, long candidate for United States senator from Missouri, and characterized him as a "man of great intellect."

Mrs. Doshia Breckenridge, who was to have spoken here Saturday afternoon supporting the Democratic ticket did not come; but spoke at Sturgeon instead.

The rain during the afternoon prevented Judge Henry having a large audience. He was introduced by B. M. Anderson.

Children Deserted by Parents Have Queer Ideas of Family Life

Children from families where either of the parents has deserted usually have queer ideas as to the relations between man and wife. This conclusion was drawn by a student in the University who has spent nearly two years in research work among deserted families in St. Louis.

On a picnic one day, a little boy from a deserted family saw this student scuffling and, to all appearances, fighting with a girl in the crowd of picnickers. Later, the lad called the University student aside and whispered, "Is she your wife?"

"No, why?" replied the student. "I thought she was; I see you fighting all the time."

The student cites this as an example of the idea that many children get of home life, especially where family trouble has caused desertion.

A study of the desertion cases handled by the St. Louis Provident Association and observations among a corresponding number of families where no disturbances have taken place were included in this research work.

Physical disabilities and lack of training are cited as causes of desertion. The exact and most inclusive reasons for desertion have not been decided, but divorces show that those who lack proper moral standards, mental or physical training, proper standards or ideals of family life are found frequently among deserted families. Over indulgence and lack of home training are also given as reasons for desertion.

FRESHMEN SHOULDNT RESIST A FREE MUD BATH, BARBERS SAY

Freshmen who are thrown in the pond at the University farm should not complain—the mud is good for them, barbers say. At least, it costs more than a dollar to get massaged with mud at the barber shop.

Of course, it is not the mud which makes the massage cost so much, it is the time it takes. The mud has to be dried on the face, and much time is consumed in administering and removing the preparation, for which barbers must be paid.

It is claimed that the mud massage is a sure cure for blackheads and pimples. Who said only women were vain?
