Garage Owners Want Rest. Rainy Season Last Homecoming Kept Them Busy. Columbia garage owners are wishing for good weather for the Thanksgiving football game crowds. "I don't know whether I could live through another siege like we had at the Homecoming game last year or not," said Jack Taylor at the John N. Taylor Garage. "We were busy until the game was half over pulling cars out of the mud that belonged to people anxious to get to the Missouri-Nebraska game."

Then they decided that it would be impossible to get their cars home so they left them with us. More than 200 mud-logged cars were with us; garage full, barn full and a line of cars in the street. It got down to freezing that night and we had to drain every car."

Why do I sing? "Why do I sing?" he replied to a question. I sing because my father, my grandfather and my great-grandfather before me sang. I was brought up on singing. When in the University of New York, where I graduated in 1906, I sang with the glee club there. I have been singing ever since then.

He expressed regret that he could not remain here for the Thanksgiving game. "When we hit a town where it's dull, we may stay there sometimes for three or four days but when we find a town like this, we must dash right out again."

Geneva, Seat of League Meeting, Important Educational Center

Geneva, where the League of Nations is in session, derived its name from the old French word "genevive" which was corrupted by popular etymology into "Geneva," meaning juniper. It is the capital of a Swiss canton of the same name, located on the Rhone-River near the Lake of Geneva, known all over the world for its natural beauty.

The first appearance of the word Geneva in history was in the time of the Helvetians, as a fortified border town, which was taken by the Romans in 120 B. C. Since that time it passed from the different hands of its conquerors. In the year 443 A. D. it was taken by Burgundy, and in 1033 it became a conquered territory of the German emperor.

In the Historia Aemeronum in Gregorio Leti, published in Amsterdam in 1686, Geneva appears to have been christianized by Dionysius Areopagita and Paracodus, two of the seventy-five disciples in the time of Domitian.

The famous Swiss watches are manufactured in this city. It is estimated that the annual output of that industry averages $1,000,000 and the jewelry, gold and silver ornaments amount to $3,000,000.

In 1900 it had 105,710 inhabitants. The main religions of the people are the Protestant and Catholic, both having an even number of adherents.

It is a very important educational center. Its universities have attracted a good number of foreigners. There are three leading institutions located at Geneva: Lausanne University founded in 1537 and created a university in 1890, with live faculties; Neuchatel University established as an academy in 1866 and chartered as a university in 1909; and Geneva University, founded by Calvin and Beza, two Protestant reformers, in 1559, which attained its university rank in 1873, embracing five faculties. The latter is the most important of all having an attendance of 1200 students, many of them from abroad.

Geneva Arbitration between Great Britain and the United States during the Civil War took place also in this city. The international trouble was caused by the depredations of the Alabama and other Confederate cruisers upon English commerce. The arbitration tribunal was instituted as the result of the Treaty of Washington which took place in February 1871.

Another historical importance that is attached to this city is the Geneva Convention, which was held in 1864, under the presidency of General Dufour, the Swiss Plenipotentiary, for the purpose of finding better means of treating the wounded and sick soldiers in time of war. The pioneers in this movement were Dr. Durant, a resident of Geneva and his friend, Monsieur Moynier, chairman of the Society of Public Utility.

Ninety per cent of the people speak French, Italian, German and English are widely employed in the social circles and business places. It is noticed among the Swiss people the ability to converse in three modern languages. The University of Missouri has two French instructors, both natives of Switzerland.

During the last few years the amount of property in Columbia which has been taken over for uses incident to that of the University has increased noticeably. The number of houses which have been erected entirely for the use of students is large. The student organizations in the University have undergone a tremendous growth, both in number of members and in their property holdings. A few years ago there were no houses owned by the fraternities. All the houses occupied were rented and were small. The fraternities averaged from five to fifteen members. There was no need for the big houses which they have today. Their investment in property was nothing. They owned no furnishings of any kind. All the property which they had was the individual property of the members.

Today, however, things have changed radically. The size of the organizations has increased several times over that of the old days. With the increased membership the need for the big houses became urgent. Also the financial power of the fraternities increased and the result is large investments in local property for chapter houses.

There are now eleven fraternity houses and four sorority houses owned and occupied by the organizations themselves. These properties constitute some of the most handsome places in Columbia. They are located in all parts of town and have done a great deal to build up the different sections. With the recent advance in all Columbia property and the increases in building costs, the value of the fraternity and sorority houses totals almost half a million dollars. With the building of these houses the fraternities and sororities become a concrete part of the University and the town. They become taxpayer and whatever is of interest to the residents of Columbia is becoming of interest to them.

The last fraternity house to be erected is that of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon which is now in the course of construction. Although the house will not be completely finished at this time still when it is finished it will represent an investment of approximately $60,000.

NOTE BOARD IS INSTALLED

Women's Council Adopts System Used in Other Colleges. Have you seen the note board? It has been placed in the Academic Hall rest room by the Women's Council. The purpose is to promote communication between University women, and lessen the number of telephone calls.

When you want to send a message to a girl whose address is unknown, write a note and slip it in the slot under the letter with which her name begins. You can be reasonably sure that she will receive it.

The note-board system has been used in many universities and colleges. At Smith College all mail is delivered by this system. At Wisconsin and Nebraska Universities such boards are placed on the campus for the use of all students.

The impracticability of reaching students by telephone was the cause for the establishment of the board here. If the plan works successfully it may be expanded for all students.
