BIG TEN TITLE UNCERTAIN

Basketball Championship Rests Between Indiana and Illinois.

The various dopsters in the Big Ten Conference are in a quandary over the basketball championship. Recent games have upset the dope to such an extent that a forecast at this time could be little more than a guess. The final games of the Western Conference schedule do not come off until the second week in this month. Yet it is expected that tilts scheduled for Tuesday will settle the title.

Ten days ago Indiana and Illinois were out in the lead and many were conceding one of them the championship. The twenty-first was a red letter day for Illinois, as she jumped into first place.

The Indians, however, celebrated Washington's birthday by losing to Purdue and dropped back into a tie with Indiana. Purdue has little chance to win, as she still has many conference games to play, most of them away from home and with the strongest teams in the loop.

Indiana looks good for many reasons. She has the easiest schedule of the three and all of her games are on the home court. Illinois has the strong Chicago five and two other quintets to play away from home.
