To elect two directors to serve for a period of three years.

Said election will be held in conjunction with the city election of the city of Columbia, Missouri, at the same polling places and under direction of the same judges and clerks. Voters living outside said city will vote in that ward of said city to which they would be attached if the ward lines of said city were produced in straight lines throughout said territory to the limits of said district.

Note: Owing to the uncertainty as to what action will be taken by the State Board of Equalization respecting the matter of a full assessment of taxable property, the School Board does not deem it wise to ask that the levy for school purposes be fixed at this election, but feels that the matter of levy should be deferred and a special election for that purpose held after the State Board has rendered its decision.

BOONE COUNTY GREW OUT OF MANY TAVERNS

Early Roadhouses and Hotels Had Important Part in Much of Our Local, County and State History.

DANCING CAUSED TRIAL

Hinkson Creek Named After Man Who Drove His Cattle in a Circle Throughout Entire Day.

Around the early taverns of Boone County and Missouri are woven interesting incidents, anecdotes, bits of romance and history. The state itself had its beginnings within a tavern, the Missouri Hotel, built in 1817. McNair, the first Missouri governor, and Ashley, the first lieutenant-governor, were inaugurated there; Barton and Benton, the first United States senators, were elected there.

Tavern-keeping was often connected with preaching in the early days before churches were built, and religious services were commonly held within a hotel. The social standing of the inn-keeper was good; tavern-keepers were almost invariably honest.

In Monroe County, a church trial arose over the practice of dancing in the Glenn House at Paris, managed by a Baptist minister, Anderson Woods, and his wife, Betsy. The Rev. Mr. Woods objected to the dancing which was habitually done in a large room of his hotel. His wife did not share his scruples, however, and when he was called away on a preaching appointment, she yielded to the pleas of the young people who wished to dance. The husband, meanwhile, had found a creek which he could not ford and, returning unexpectedly, found the dance at its height. He was won over immediately and said he could see no harm in that. Church authorities did, however, and he was brought to trial.

"BENTON SLEEPS WITH NO MAN" Politics was the most dominant theme of tavern conversation and difficulties. It is told that Thomas H. Benton was so adverse to Whig politics and incidentally had so many enemies in Columbia, that when passing through the town, he refused to lodge here, but went out three miles in "the country to the old Van Horn Tavern to accept poorer accommodations, rather than stay where opposition was so strong. If Benton was ever in a hotel where crowded conditions made it necessary for some of the men to sleep together, he was strong in reiterating, "Benton sleeps with no man."

Col. W. B. Royal, a Virginian and highly educated man, kept one of the early taverns in Columbia. He added "Semper Paratus" to the customary wording of the swinging sign. Buck Lampton, of historic memory for his quickness of speech, told people that "Semper Paratus" stood for "Sweet milk and potatoes."

Hinkson Creek, originally called something else, derived its name, according to E. W. Stephens, historian of Boone County, from what befell Robert Hinkson, a tavern-keeper and one of the first settlers in this county. Hinkson had quite a herd of cattle. He started from home one morning in early winter to drive the herd to the river bottom, intending to leave them there, as was the custom, to rough it until spring. When night came, he camped on the bank of the stream. Next morning he drove out into the forest and kept the course as well as he could all day. At night he found himself on the identical spot where he had camped the previous night. The other settlers fastened the joke on Hinkson and made it a living tradition by giving the creek his name.

TAVERN CENTERS TOWNS There are towns of considerable population and even cities in Missouri, the beginnings of which were taverns. The first house built in what afterwards became Columbia was General Gentry's house. It had three rooms—two of which accommodated the family. The third room was set aside for the traveling public. The next year, General Gentry added another room to his house. His neighbors thought he was becoming extravagant. When General Gentry led his 1,000 mounted Missourians out of Columbia for the long journey to subdue the Seminoles, the march began from in front of the Gentry tavern where the farewell ceremony took place. The command was drawn up and the flag, made by the young ladies of Miss Wale's academy, was presented.

Tavern-keepers located their houses of entertainment with foresight as to coming settlements and prospective main-travelled roads. When the Daughters of the American Revolution started the patriotic work of placing monuments to mark the Boone's Lick road from St. Louis, they found that many of the points of historical interest were sites of pioneer taverns. Among Boone County sites selected, were Vivion's Stagestand and Van Horn's Tavern.

ARE AFTER CROP THIEVES

Agriculture Experiment Station on Trail of Pesticiferous Insects.

Sworn in as members of a state police force, the workers in the entomology department of the Agricultural Experiment Station are saving millions annually from insects—the worst thieves of farm crops. By these scientific police officers more than 400,000 trees and plants are inspected annually as they enter the state in shipments from outside nurseries. Nearly 1,500 acres of nursery stock within the state were examined in the official nursery inspection last year. Similar work is done by the same department establishing the zone system of fire-free dates for wheat sowing. The Missouri station saved $5,000,000 worth of wheat in one year.

NEW LIGHT-SIX

SMASHES RECORDS!

Carrying U. S. Mail, a Studebaker LIGHT-SIX has established four speed records between San Francisco and Los Angeles—traveling faster than any automobile or train ever made the trips before—and proving LIGHT-SIX stamina!

Here is what the LIGHT-SIX did:

- Made the round trip from San Francisco to Los Angeles, 864.8 miles, in 21 hours 23 minutes elapsed time—a new record.
- Made the one-way trip over the Coast Route, 453.7 miles, in 10 hours 12 minutes 30 seconds elapsed time—a new record.
- Made the one-way trip over the Valley Route, 411.1 miles, in 9 hours 15 minutes 50 seconds elapsed time—a new record.
- Beat "The Lark," fastest express train between San Francisco and Los Angeles, by 3 hours 47 minutes 30 seconds—a new record.

This car was duly deputized, upon orders from Washington, to carry U. S. Mail.

These remarkable records—this exhibition of speed and stamina—prove how the Studebaker NEW LIGHT-SIX can make long-continued runs without mechanical trouble—the car established its records on two trips, and was ready to start on the second immediately after completing the first.

You can have the advantage of its motor's wonderful gasoline economy and the satisfaction of its smoothness of operation only by owning a Studebaker LIGHT-SIX. We are ready to demonstrate and make deliveries.
