

A PUBLICATION BY VOCATIONAL MEN PLANNED

E. J. Allen of Federal Board Would Make School of Journalism Center for Plan. SERVE 5,279 STUDENTS Purpose to Reel Interest in Government Training by Printing Students' Success.

Plans for a publication, which is to be devoted to the interest of the vocational students of this district, were presented to the vocational students in the School of Journalism of the University yesterday afternoon by E. J. Allen, who is connected with the Federal Board of Vocational Education of this district. The publication is to serve 5,279 vocational men now in training throughout the district, which is composed of Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa.

The publication will receive close cooperation from the district board, but it is to be financially self supporting. As yet definite plans for its management, and other details regarding the paper remain unsettled.

Mr. Allen said that its purpose would be to serve as a link between the vocational students and the board. Space in this publication will be taken up by the federal board's district office in which information on the recent rulings of the federal board will be given. It will also serve as an educational medium. Articles for this purpose have already been arranged for, should the publication materialize. An article, "Agriculture as a Vocation for Disabled Men," by Dean Munford, is to find an early appearance.

It will also serve as a news center for the twelve local offices in this district and will aid in exchange news of the activities of the various boards. It is also to keep the men informed of the successes of vocational men that have been placed in positions after completing the vocational training. This Mr. Allen thinks will serve to stimulate and maintain interest in vocational training. Mr. Allen explained that although the paper would be operated by the federal board as a medium, the publication will be altogether in the hands of the vocational students and its contents would breathe of the vocational students' interests.

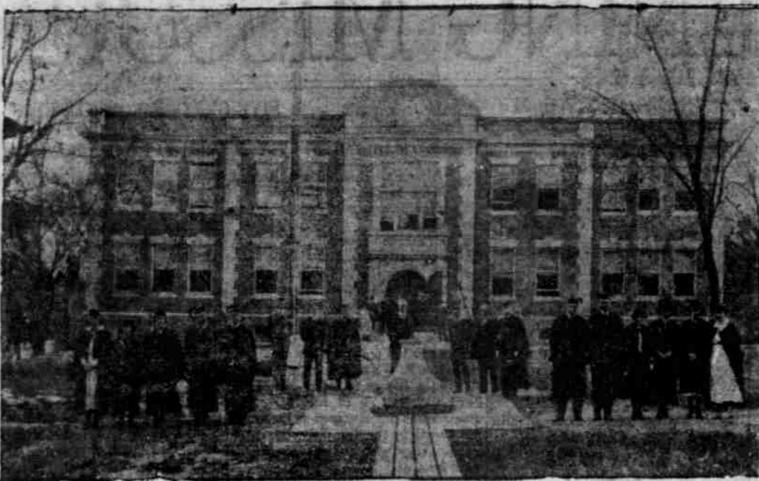

The location of the School of Journalism here prompted the federal district board to select this place from among the twelve centers as the center of publication.

The vocational students of this place will have an opportunity to express their willingness to cooperate in a project of this publication, Thursday night at 7:30, room 201 in the Agricultural Building.

Camp Kechuwa in Michigan Holds Many Attractions for Girls

"Mighty oaks from little acorns grow" is a true statement, indeed, when applied to Camp Kechuwa, a girls' summer camp near Michigamme, Mich., conducted by Miss Helen Ross, formerly of Columbia, and her sister, Miss Ella Ross of Chicago. Miss Helen Ross was a councillor at a camp in this section of the country in 1913, opening her own camp the following year with twenty-seven girls from St. Louis, Chicago and Kansas City. Last year there were seventy-three girls who enjoyed the hiking, swimming and other forms of recreation afforded there. The camps operated in 1920 were: Wisconsin, Kentucky, Texas, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Arkansas, Indiana and Michigan. This year the camp will be limited to 100 campers, most of whom have sent in their applications.

The staff of councillors, originally composed of ten college graduates, has been increased to twenty, including a swimming master, a dietitian, a guide and a trained nurse. The young college women are chosen for their experience in camping, their skill in athletics and their understanding of girls. They act as supervisors in all activities and on all occasions. There will be one councillor to every four girls at camp this year.

Camp Kechuwa is especially successful in carrying out the idea of self-government. Every girl feels a personal responsibility for the little things as well as the larger ones. This is also emphasized as one of the requirements for good sportsmanship and general proficiency.

Summer at Camp Kechuwa means real camp life. The campers live in tents, built with board floors, well raised from the ground, and of two sizes to accommodate two or four campers each. Each camper is expected to do her part in keeping her tent in order. There is daily tent inspection. The purpose of Camp Kechuwa is to provide wholesome recreation for girls by means of interesting and profitable activities, with congenial companionship under careful supervision. Camp life tends to foster a cheerful, unselfish attitude towards others and to develop a spirit of co-operation and loyalty. Kechuwa offers a large variety of activities, all of which are voluntary. Instruction in all sports is given and each girl is encouraged to become proficient in more than one. A silver loving cup is awarded to the camper who attains the highest degree of excellence in each sport. Contests and tournaments are held during the last week of the season. Swimming and canoeing conditions are especially ideal as the camp is located on the shores of Lake Michigamme. Other popular sports are tennis, basketball, volleyball, archery, shooting, dancing and hiking. A record of miles is kept for each camper. Events of the week are written up by the campers and read before the camp fire in the "Tepes" bungalow on Sunday evening. The best of the chronicles are published for the campers in the Kechuwa annual, "Birch Bark." From July 1 to August 25 every camper is fed on the best foods obtainable. Miss Ella Ross, a scientific planner in nutrition and who is doing research work at the University of Chicago this year. Special care is taken in assisting those who are underweight. Although the camp is away from the hum and whirl of the city fresh foods from Chicago are shipped there by refrigerator freight. Fruits, eggs and milk are purchased from the local shops. A new community building is now being constructed for the junior campers. These younger girls will live in tents on one side of the camp, having their own provisions, and the older, or senior girls will occupy the remaining plot of ground. When these warm days call boys out to the old swimming hole or to summer military camps, girls are wishing or preparing to spend a cool summer in the Michigan woods. The following girls from here have attended Camp Kechuwa for one summer or more: Misses Dorothy Dorsey, Sarah Tandy, Clara Corum, Queen Smith, Aurelia Spaulding, Frances and Virginia Hunt, Frances and J. B. Ross, Dorothy Munford and Ella Wyatt. Miss Helen Ross visited in Columbia two weeks ago on her way to Chicago where she will spend a few weeks before going to Michigamme to prepare the camp for her many children, as she calls her campers, who will roll into camp July 1, ready to don their middie and knickers for a two months' good time.

NEWSPAPER IS PUBLISHED BY COLLEGE GIRLS

Stephens' English Students Learn Correct Forms of Writing Suitable for Publication.

INSTITUTED LAST FALL. Journal Contains No Advertising—Printed Monthly—5,000 Copies of Next Issue.

A school paper, maintained by the institution itself at its own expense for the purpose of providing a laboratory for the students in English classes and sent out free to students, alumnae and persons interested in the college—such is the Stephens Standard, official paper of Stephens College, and unique in these two particulars among school papers of the country. As a further distinction among school papers this one contains no advertising. Since it is maintained by the college as a science laboratory, there is no necessity for making expenses by selling advertising space.

The paper was instituted last fall by Roy L. Johnson, an English teacher in Stephens College, and has grown to have a rather remarkable circulation since that time. It is published once a month. The current issue is expected to be ready for distribution either today or tomorrow. Five thousand copies of this issue are being printed, the printing being done by the E. W. Stephens Printing Company.

Every class in English composition is definitely associated with the paper, and the editing is done by the class in advanced composition, with Mr. Johnson as the final authority on what is to be contained in the paper. A careful record is kept by him of what the students write which is good enough to print.

whether or not it gets into print. In this way he is able to grade the students on their ability and the work they do. All students in the advanced composition class are required to hand in material for this paper and those who are making English I are allowed to hand in articles in place of regular composition work. Thus the girls learn to write actually writing for publication. Mr. Johnson is a firm believer in the value of newspaper training and experience as preparation for more advanced literary work. At the beginning of the year Mr. Johnson organized the class and they decided upon an editorial policy for the paper. Among the things which they stress are the promotion of the use of good English in the school, the publication of all unbiased news of college life, a news medium where the alumnae may learn what is going on at the college; and constructive work to bring prominently to the people's minds the real needs of the institution. At present there are twelve people on the editorial board who have the veto on what goes into the paper. Next year Mr. Johnson expects to increase this number to twenty-five. At that time they will probably be divided into groups of about five each and each group given the work of a special department, such as news, special features, editorial, etc. Ninety per cent of the paper is strictly student production and the other 10 per cent is left to Mr. Johnson to fill up himself or with contributions from other members of the faculty. The paper has a more serious and business-like tone to it than most papers of similar nature.

The Great Business Class Room of 1921

Successful American business men are studying current conditions. More of them are coming to think their way to and through shifting situations, such as are presented by new problems of distribution. They are finding facts and facing them. They have discovered that by groups they grapple best with stubborn questions of policy and practice. Trade troubles seem to yield to the inspiration and concentration of mass thought and discussion. Impulses merge, desires fuse, and great good grows out of agreement on purposes and goals. These advertising meetings have come to be known as Business Class Rooms. One of the greatest of these will assemble in Atlanta in June, the

Seventeenth Annual Convention
Associated Advertising Clubs of the World
Atlanta, June 12-16

Thousands of men from hundreds of cities will gather in this five-day University of Experience. They will assemble to exchange cash-drawer ideas and share long-cherished ideals.

Come! Give and take in this Great Business Class Room!
Exhibits of Domestic and Foreign Advertising, demonstrating the use of practically all recognized mediums, and arranged solely with a view to helping the convention-delegate, will be a special feature which, alone, will make the trip worth while.

In June, Atlanta is at its best. High on a ridge between the Gulf and the Atlantic, fanned by cooling breezes and clad in gay summer attire, it is, as proved by United States Weather Bureau reports, a delightful place in June.
