Miss Frances Ross, daughter of Mrs. J. B. Ross, 27 Allen place, and Lowell Leake of Akron, Ohio, were married at 10 o'clock this morning at the Kappa Kappa Gamma house. The father of the groom, the Rev. E. S. Leake, read the services before the mantel-piece which was banked with palms and ferns. At each end of the mantel-piece tall white tapers were lighted and on each side there were wicker baskets filled with fleur-de-lis. Miss Kathryn Campbell played Lohengrin's wedding march. The bride was dressed in a navy blue tulle-trimmed suit and a hat of French straw trimmed with tulle and beads. She carried bride's roses and lilies of the valley. After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home in Akron, Ohio. The out-of-town guests were: The Rev. and Mrs. E. S. Leake of Akron, Ohio; Miss Mary Hopkins of Kansas City and Charles G. Ross of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. J. W. Hubson, 417 Hill street, will entertain at tea from 4 to 6 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in honor of Miss Anna Pape. Iris in a silver basket will form the centerpiece for the dining room table. Those in the receiving line besides the hostess will be: Miss Anna Pape and Mrs. C. M. Pape. Mrs. Jonas Viles will serve at the table in the dining room and she will be assisted by: Misses Ruth Rollins, Katherine Jones, Maria Tasterin, Frances Mitchell, Helen Mitchell, Eulalie Pape, Freda Pape and Elizabeth Spaulding. Those assisting in the living room will be: Mrs. R. J. Kermer, Mrs. O. M. Stewart, Mrs. C. E. Moulton and Miss Mary Jesse.

drawings of stars and planets. On clear summer nights he sits on his front porch examining the myriad stars which to him are peopled with living beings, canals, perhaps cabbagees and ordinary things such as grow around us. Betelgeuse, reputed to be 213,000,000 times bigger than the sun, has more attraction for him than any golf links or high score.

"Yes, I always did run to stars," Justice Bicknell chuckled.

MANUAL TRAINING FOR GIRLS

Four of seven in class in U. H. S. Are Girls. In a class of seven taking manual training at the University High School, four of the numbers are girls. They like the work and do almost as well as the boys in the class. What they lack in ability they make up in enthusiasm. As their instructor says, "They do pretty well for girls."

REPORTS MADE OF 100 CASES

Health Law Helps Prevent Spread of Illness, Says Dr. W. A. Norris.

Nearly 100 cases of communicable diseases have been reported by attending physicians since the new law requiring such reports went into effect, according to Dr. W. A. Norris, deputy state commissioner of health for Boone County.

About half of the cases reported have been smallpox, both light and severe. However, no death has occurred in any of these cases. There are still some cases of smallpox, but these are mostly of a light nature. Influenza, although a communicable disease, and hence coming under the new laws, was not reported by physicians on account of its mild form this year.

Some of the other cases reported are scarlet fever, tuberculosis and diphtheria. The people, according to Doctor Norris, have been observing the quarantine laws, but some of them had to be threatened with punishment before they submitted to quarantine. In some cases the attending physician has failed to report and the disease communicated itself to others.

In all cases reported the house was fumigated after the patient recovered. There were only three cases of typhoid fever reported, all in the same family. The cause could not be located. The cases, however, were not severe, and all three got well. Where the contagious cases have been in a light form, the quarantine was lifted within two weeks. In more severe cases the quarantine lasts as long as a month.

Since the new law went into effect, Doctor Norris has been making weekly reports to the State Board of Health. Beginning next week, however, reports will also have to be sent to Washington for statistical purposes.

The new law, according to Doctor Norris, has helped greatly to prevent the spread of communicable diseases. The doctors as a whole have responded to the demands of the law, but some have not yet turned in any reports of contagious diseases. Doctor Norris was unable to say whether that was due to neglect on the part of the doctors, or to lack of cases.

What the county needs most, according to Doctor Norris, is a vaccination law which could be enforced. As it is, vaccination in the county is difficult, since it is optional with the individual concerned. The schools of the county are empowered by law to vaccinate all the pupils whenever a communicable disease makes its appearance. However, the parents can keep their children from being vaccinated by keeping them away from school. This has often happened, particularly in St. Louis and Kansas City, where the school boards have had difficulties with protesting parents.

There are other cases of a contagious character which are not being reported to Doctor Norris, but go directly to the state board of health. These include some of the social diseases which the attending physician sends directly to the state board of health with the name of the individual, which is designated by a number, and various other data which the patient is required to submit.

The state board then takes cognizance of the case, and supplies the patient, from time to time, with various instructions as to how to prevent the possible communication of the disease to others.

SEWING SHARES STAGE WITH HOUSECLEANING AS THE SPRING SPORT

In the spring a woman's thoughts turn to fashion and clothes. Practically every seamstress in Columbia is busy planning clothes for mother, sister, little brother and even the baby. Then the fitting and completion of these costumes before the summer going away adds not only to the seamstress's duties but to the daily toil of the shop clerks, who pull down bolts after bolt of material to show to their customers.

Some women find it less troublesome to plan and sew their own frocks at home or at the Kieffer School. This school was established thirteen years ago in Columbia and is designed to aid those women who wish to wear well tailored clothes less the exclusive price of the fashionable shop.

The membership in the school was transferred from one town to another, originally, but due to the increase of the schools in various Missouri towns, it was quite impossible to take care of the large number of transfers, so that now a membership is good only in one school for any number of years. Some days there are as many as thirty women sewing for a period of three or six hours. Other days the number of workers does not exceed six. University girls find the sewing school a delightful place to accomplish that much sought art, dress-making.

Missouri Co-Eds Just Learning to Take Proper Care of Feet

Many University girls suffer from foot trouble, according to Miss Helen Gath, assistant professor of physical education. Miss Gath attributes these troubles, which range from callouses and corns to fallen arches, to the large amount of walking the girls here do in high heels and to the indiscriminate changing from high heels to low ones.

The physical education department is visited by about one girl a day with arch trouble. The girls are given instructions about exercises they can take to strengthen their feet and these help them to find relief. The dancing class also does a great deal in the matter of building up their feet and to manage all the muscles. Miss Gath believes that the tendency in American colleges at present is to wear sensible shoes. It is her opinion that by the use of good judgment in other things the girls will acquire better knowledge in their choice of footwear. By means of this better knowledge and also by giving attention to exercises to build up their feet, many girls are able to cure foot troubles which bother them when they come to school.

The difficulty in getting college girls to wear low-heeled shoes is not in persuading the girl herself to do so, as most girls prefer low heels after they find how much more comfortable they are. It is not easy, however, to find such shoes in the shops. The shoe manufacturers, who have been rather willing to make such shoes for the last few years, have recently discontinued it to a great extent.

In the north, Miss Gath says, many
