

NATION'S COAL MINES HELD A PUBLIC UTILITY

public utility business where it rightfully belongs," said Mr. Simpson.

IN ANOTHER part of his address, in speaking of state regulation through the commission, he said that Missouri has one of the best commission laws in the United States. After describing the complex problems with which a state commission on public service has to deal, he offered four steps of reform in that body, pointing out that since he was about to end his career as a state commissioner he could not be accused of selfish motives. He would have the commission: (1) constitutional in legal existence; (2) the personnel thereof appointive, never elective; (3) the tenure of office to equal that of our Supreme Court, and (4) the members required to give exclusive attention to their official work.

In discussing the widely discussed question of whether the utilities should be regulated by state commission or local city control, Mr. Simpson said that "so far as the law is concerned, there is no difference."

"But," added the commissioner, "the trouble with some of those who argue for local city control is that they seem to forget that as a legal proposition a city is only a part or a political subdivision of a state. The state must at all times be the basic jurisdictional unit. It is a fundamental of state government to function for the general welfare of the state and not for any particular subdivision. I have never said that the cities are not competent to control their local public utilities, but I have said, and repeat again, that these cities will never be permitted again to control these utilities as they did before the advent of present state regulation."

GOOD SERVICE FOR THE PUBLIC

Mr. Simpson dwelt for some time upon the question of rate base property values and what should be allowed as yearly investment return and depreciation. "If experience in state regulation has taught us nothing else," he said, "it has taught us that we must hold property values to a safe, conservative base, allow a reasonably liberal rate for return and depreciation and then require good service to the public," he said.

The commissioner concluded his subject by saying, "If I had my way I would place all your utilities in a prosperous going-concern condition, and then demand a service in keeping therewith. If you did not furnish the service I would penalize you until you did. That is what the public wants and they can never get a continuity thereof unless the utilities are allowed to be in a reasonably prosperous condition."

"Let me illustrate what I mean. The difference between good and bad service of gas, electric, water or telephone connected with the every day home life of a family, may be covered by a charge of 1 to 2 cents a day on that family. It constitutes very little financial outlay on the part of the family, but taken in the aggregate may put the utility furnishing the service in such a healthy financial condition that it can deliver a service reasonably satisfactory to all families served."

JAPAN SUPPRESSES PAPER

Issue of Japan Advertiser Prints Songs of Radicals.

The Japanese government suppressed the Tuesday issue of the Japan Advertiser of Tokyo, because it published English translations of the song of the revolution and the terrorist song which were sung by labor paraders in demonstrations held in Tokyo, the day before.

The song of the revolution calls on dwellers in the slums, and the thousands garbed in tattered clothes to wake up and no longer submit to a rule of oppression and persecution. The song also alludes to the brethren who are fighting for freedom in Russia.

The terrorist song is more violent, asserting that all Japan will be deluged with blood.

Carrying banners demanding outright recognition of the Soviet and singing their revolutionary songs, 2,000 members of the Association of Peddlers, the Union of Propertyless men, the League of Free Men, the Association of Tenants and Farmers, the Association of Iron Workers and also a group of journalists led by a Socialistic writer and Korean laborers made up the May Day parade. The editorial staff of the Japan Advertiser is made up of graduates from the School of Journalism.

POSTAL WEEK IS SUCCESS

Purpose Is Co-operation Between Public and Postoffice.

The first annual national Postal Week, May 1-6, recommended by Postmaster-General Work, was observed in Columbia with good results, according to Postmaster Woods.

The purpose of this period devoted to postal matters is to stimulate co-operation between the public and the post-office department, local and national. By placards and newspaper advertising, the public is urged to mail all matter early, address plainly, stamp properly, tie parcels securely, and to use as few stamps on packages as possible, giving preference to stamps of large denomination rather than many small ones.

Woods says the public has responded enthusiastically to the call for co-operation and has striven to conform to the requests made by the Postoffice Department.

"AGE OF INNOCENCE" BRINGS IN SUSPENDERS AND ALSO NIGHTSHIRTS

Conversation and simplicity will be the dominating note in men's future styles. Even suspenders and sleeve supporters are coming back. An "age of innocence" in men's clothing is the prophecy of the United Clothiers, now holding their convention in Chicago. Suspenders, almost obsolete in the last few years, are being sold more and more each day by local clothiers. Isadore Barth said that it is probably on account of the increased use of the tuxedo and full dress suits, which require suspenders. There will be no wild-colored suspenders worn, for the general trend is toward white and dull colors.

Most suits worn this spring are of tan and gray colors. The wild age we have just passed is being supplanted by a less nervous and inartistic time. There will be no wide-striped patterns in the near future. All patterns will be of a refined and dignified design, materializing in clothing our quietest feeling. For fall wear suits for the greater part will be blue, gray and tan. The only intense colors will be in the coat linings. Nightshirts will be worn in preference to pajamas in the future because of price and durability. A good nightshirt may be bought for $1.50, while a poor grade of pajamas costs $2.50.

Flat-heeled shoes and rubbers are also to be in great demand. No heel will be over an inch high, the average heel being seven-eighths of an inch high. The major cause of the popularity of this heel is its comfort. Of course, the army shoe has influenced men's shoe styles. In the last five or six years rubbers have not been needed, both because of the better quality of shoes and because of the milder climate we have had. Pride has also been a barrier to the use of rubbers by youth. G. C. Helm of Levy's shoe store expressed the opinion that both men and women in the fall. A manufacturers' style show in Boston, May 12 to 15, will determine the styles for the coming year, especially for women.

The Great Master Salesman

ADVERTISING is a great Master Salesman, working all the business hours, through the evenings and far into the night. It never lays off. It works all the time, and with splendid results for those who know how to use it. It helps the business house, saving all its costs, and more, by reducing other sales expense. It informs the public, and makes buying easier and safer.

Today, definite knowledge of advertising is urgently important to business men, for times have changed.

We are selling goods on a gradual falling market. We must move goods rapidly. Alert business men are revising their advertising methods—and several thousand such men, experts through practical experience, will gather at the great
