Young Aaron was in Butler Saturday. The wets and the dries were lined up on the streets busily engaged in argument. It looks like the fight is on and the voters are preparing their ballots for the battle royal in November. The time is close at hand for the voter to choose, which he will vote for, strong drink and be cursed with all of its evil effects or Prohibition and be blessed with all of its good effects. When we vote for the liquor interest, we vote for the drunkard to keep on getting drunk; beat and starve his family and for the saloon in to create new drinkers to break mothers' hearts, because their boys are drinking and going to ruin; some to the penitentiary, some to the gallows and all to a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's eternity. When we vote for Prohibition, we vote for the drinker to stop drinking, the drunkard to stop getting drunk and provide food and clothing for his family and stop the saloon. From manufacturing new drinkers that mothers may be proud of their sober boys and instead of going the downward they are traveling the upward road to the plain of noble manhood, making their dear old mothers' hearts glad to see her boy grown to be a good useful man to a better and higher life. It is written as we sow so shall we reap. Should we not consider what kind of a vote we sow in Missouri in November on the liquor question? In sowing wheat, flax, oats and planting corn, we are very careful about the seed. We sow, for we know we will reap what we sow. Have your lamps filled with Prohibition oil and be ready to use your Prohibition talent, and you will rejoice to reap the harvest.
