CARE OF BREEDING ANIMALS.

They Require Special Attention at This Season of the Year.

Female breeding animals require special attention at two seasons of the year. The first is during the breeding period and the other is when the young are being reared. It is a good business policy to keep a good breeding female and, through lack of careful attention and attention, fail to see that she becomes pregnant. Ordinarily a half an hour or more a day should be spent on the animal at this season of the year to prevent a wasted year in the life of a breeding female. It is equally poor business policy to take pains that females are bred at the proper time and safely settled, to carefully carry them through their period of pregnancy, and then at the close of that period lose their young for lack of attention.

A rainy week during the farrowing season costs thousands of pigs in Missouri. It is certainly true that some special effort can be made to save little pigs after money has been invested in a sow and she has been carefully fed and cared for throughout her period of pregnancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Walters of Jackson were in the city Sunday to visit their father, Henry Walters, who has been quite ill.

GAME WARDENSEEKS VIOLATORS IN CAPE

Tim Birmingham Is Proving To Be Excellent State Official, Record Shows

Tim Birmingham, State Game Warden, accompanied by Felix De Lassus, of Menfro, assistant game warden, spent several days in the Cape this week, looking for mammals who hunt without licenses. While here they also conducted a number of hides at the Ruchmann plant in north Cape. Mr. Ruchmann purchased the hides with junk, he told the officials. Trappers who kill fur-bearing animals at this season of the year do so at their own risk and are liable to prosecution if discovered.

Mr. Birmingham has established an unusual record in office, and for enforcement of the game laws is in a class by himself. The last Legislature passed a law, getting aside a portion of the receipts from the game warden's office for the purchase of a state park. Mr. Birmingham has placed in this fund something more than $25,000 in a year's time, which is ample proof of his efficient administration.

The office of game and fish commissioner is maintained by license obtained by hunters and fishermen. Mr. Birmingham is therefore anxious to see that all hunters obtain a license before going forth to slay game. While here he presented to the Tribune a copy of the state laws regulating hunting and trapping. The revised section pertaining to trapping follows:

It shall be unlawful for any person to kill any fur-bearing wild animal or take, having in possession, offer for sale, bargain or buy, any fur-bearing wild animal or any pelts of fur-bearing wild animals of this state when said animals or pelts have been taken out of season. The season for taking such animals or pelts shall be from December first to December thirty-first, and from January first to February first of each year; provided that any person who may protect his premises from the ravages and depredations of any animals named in this section at any time and in any way.

Any person who violates any of the provisions of this article, shall, upon conviction thereof, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not to exceed twenty-five dollars for each offense.

Another important regulation of hunters follows:

The state game and fish commissioner may issue permits to any person to take, capture, kill, transport, within or without the state, any game, fish or bird mentioned in this article at any time when satisfied such person desires the same exclusively as specimens or for scientific or propagating purposes. Such permit will be in writing, and shall state kind and number to be taken, and the manner of taking, the name of the person to whom issued, if imported into the state, the name of the state, or territory, the name of the person shipping such birds, fish or game, and shall be signed by him; such permit shall not be transferable, nor shall it be lawful to sell or barter any of the birds, fish or game taken or imported under such permit for food purposes, and the holder of such permit shall be liable to the penalties provided in this article if he violates any of its provisions. Such permits shall be issued upon payment of five dollars and shall expire December 31st of the year issued. Provided, it shall be unlawful for any person to distribute or ship quail (bobwhite partridge) from the state for any purpose, and no permit shall be granted for such purpose. Any person or person offending against the provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall not be fined less than two hundred, nor more than five hundred dollars for each offense.

It shall be unlawful for any person to engage in the propagation of game in captivity, as provided for in section 5568 or to maintain a game farm for raising deer and elk in captivity, as is provided for in section 5591, without first obtaining a license authorizing him or her to do so. Such licenses shall so connect said game farm or propagation enterprise, as to not in any manner, conflict in the enforcement of the game laws of this state, as otherwise provided nor shall such domesticated game raised or held in captivity, be used for a cloak to nullify or make difficult enforcement of laws pertaining to wild game of the state. The license shall be for the sum of five dollars ($5), and shall expire December 31st of each year. The issuance of such license shall be discretionary with the state game and fish commissioner and may be revoked at any time. All fees for such license shall be placed in the game protection fund in like manner and for the same purpose as revenue from hunting license. A violation of this section shall be a misdemeanor and upon conviction the offender shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars ($100) nor more than five hundred dollars, ($500). The law covering hunting without license follows:

It shall be unlawful for any person, after the passage of this article, to hunt in this state without first obtaining license permitting him or her to do so. Such license shall be dated when issued, and shall authorize the person named therein to hunt during the calendar year of issue, and then subject only to the regulations and restrictions provided by law.

Any person who shall hunt in this state without being at the time of such hunting in possession of a license, as herein provided, duly issued to him or her, which license shall cover the period in which he (or she) shall be hunting, or who shall furnish to another person a license issued to him (or her), shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars and costs of prosecution.

Commissioner Birmingham, whose home is in St. James, is constantly in search of violators of the fish and game laws. Mr. De Lassus, who accompanied him to this county, lives at Menfro, and has charge of St. Genevieve, Perry and Cape Girardeau counties. Commissioner Birmingham informed the Tribune that he was not arresting hunters who shot birds from motor boats on the river.

This is a Federal regulation and as yet is not being enforced by the Missouri warden.

Commissioner Birmingham is waging a campaign against those who hunt without license and kill game out of season. He has won much praise from all quarters of the state by his rigid enforcement of the law and interest he has manifested in protecting the wild life of the state.

GIBONEY MANSION BURNED TO GROUND

Home Built in Elmwood is Ignited by Grease From Tallow Candle

The old Andrew Giboney home, built in 1835 and standing only 50 feet from the magnificent Houck home at Elmwood, was burned to the ground last Sunday evening. The building was one of the few remaining links between the past and present generations and was prized highly by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Houck for its antiquity and for the records and newspaper files that were stored therein.

Just how the fire started is not definitely known, but Major Giboney Houck assumes responsibility for it. On Sunday afternoon he entered the building in search of some articles that his father wished to see. He carried a tallow candle, and as of the opinion that the hot grease dropped on a parcel of dry paper and ignited it. While the fire did not break out until two hours later, Major Houck's explanation of the origin is no doubt correct.

As the building was located in such close proximity of the magnificent Houck home it was feared that the fire might reach Elmwood. Major Giboney Houck telephoned Mayor Haas for the city fire department, and the large engine and fire fighting crew were rushed to the scene. The building was burned to the ground when the fire department arrived, due to the fact that it had to make the long run.

Major Houck stated, however, that the fire department made excellent time, and arrived in ample time to have saved the Houck home had it caught fire.

Wet blankets were placed on the frame part of Elmwood, which was nearest the burning structure. The wind which blew from the northwest carried the flames and heat away from the new building, and it was left unharmed.

Andrew Giboney, the father of Mrs. Louis Houck, built the old building in 1835 and it was considered a mansion in those days. In this old structure Mrs. Houck spent her childhood and while its value was not insignificant, it was cherished especially by Mrs. Houck because of its intimate association with her early life. Her father was a Whig, and the photographs of all of the leaders of that old political party hung in the house. With these were many papers of Mr. Houck's, among them the files of all Cape Co. papers since then, and a file of the St. Louis Republic since 1846. A complete file of the old Cape Girardeau Eagle, which was published in this city during the civil war was also preserved there and no doubt was the only file of that paper in existence. These were prized highly by Mr. Houck.

SOME BATTLEFIELD LINGO.

War Words That Have Come to Stay After Peace Returns.

The English language is a very elastic one and ever receptive of new words and phrases. At the present time it is getting saturated with terms of military, French and American origin in particular, according to London Answers. The use of an expressive word has indeed become "a work of national importance." This term itself is one of the best evolved in the present crisis, and its powerful, unmistakable meaning has affected us all.

"Going west" is another which has a profound and poignant significance. Its origin is doubtless from "somewhere in the North America," and its peculiar applicability is seen as one thinks of the sun sinking to its rest at evening behind some of the eternal hills. "According to plan," is a military idiom which has been frequently used of late, and has much significance.

Among the phrases which have come to stay is that striking French one: "ils ne passeront pas." (They shall not pass.) It tells of grit and perseverance on the part of the brave men against fearful odds, and will ever be an inspiration to the future generations.

Much discussion has taken place recently over the meaning of the words "decimated" and "offal." The first word is frequently used by war correspondents to express great slaughter, but really it only means one in ten, being derived from the Latin word "decimus," a tenth. Offal again has a very displeasing sound to most ears, as meaning just refuse. But if we divide the word into its parts—"off" and "fall"—it loses its offensive quality and denotes simply good waste meat.

The use of the words "fly" and "flee" in our war journalism has also been confusing at times. "Fly" means to move with wings, while "flee" is a general term and denotes moving with rapidity. In speaking of the Kaiser and his people's conduct how many of us make any discrimination between the words "crime," "sin" and "vice." Yet each have quite different meanings.

Our old, well worn friends, "Blighty" and "Camouflage," hardly need reference, but the first named is doubtless derived from "bilati," the Hindu word for home and brought to this country by our soldiers from overseas. "Camouflage" is a French expression, meaning literally "to blow smoke into another's eyes"—therefore, a very effective temporary blind.
